OTTAWA — The federal government and premiers of the ten provinces of Canada today scheduled two more meetings on issues of joint concern.

● On February 16 a session on taxes, economic matters and pollution will open in Ottawa. These issues are to be discussed at the request of the western premiers. The session is to be closed to the press.

● In June constitutional talks will be resumed. They also will be closed to the press.

THATCHER ON TALKS:

'An Exercise In Futility'

OTTAWA (CP)—Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan described the federal-provincial constitutional conference today as "an exercise in futility" he can well do without. "I don't want to come to another of these for a long, long time," he said.

"What are we all doing discussing the constitution? That's not the issue. Economic problems are the issue."

Other westerners at the conference said they agreed there had been little or no progress on constitutional matters. They too felt, in Mr. Thatcher's words, that: "We should get down to bread-and-butter matters."

Prime Minister Trudeau announced the heads of government will meet Feb. 16 to discuss non-constitutional matters, including inflation and pollution.

"Fine," said Mr. Thatcher.

However, he said, Western legislatures will all be sitting at that time and this could cause problems. In addition, the scheduled meeting is only for one day.

CONSIDERED SERIOUS

Mr. Thatcher said he wanted Mr. Trudeau "to wait until April, after the sessions are over, but he feels these things are so serious we should get together."

By that time John Young, head of the federal prices and incomes commission, "will have made his report and we may find that the methods we are using to fight inflation are not enough."

"If they are not working we will have to find new weapons and provincial consent may be needed. . . . I think that's why the meeting has been called so early."

Premier Harry Strom of Alberta said of the conference:

"This was the least progress of all the conferences I've been to and I've been to three. . . . It was just a rehash of positions."

He also said economic matters demand priority and expressed a common Western stand if the constitution is to be discussed, the formula for amendment should be settled before the amendments are discussed.

Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba spoke more conservatively than his Western colleagues. Still, he said the conference was little more than a "teach-in."

SHOULD BE CLOSED

If progress is to be made, he said, the conferences should be closed to press, radio and television. In addition, meetings should be held every six months or so.

Mr. Thatcher agreed that conferences should be closed, partly to eliminate speeches directed at TV audiences and partly to give premiers room to manoeuvre.

How can Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand of Quebec "or anybody else who faces an election be really frank with the others in front of those cameras?"

Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia disagreed. The conferences should remain open "so that Canadians know what their governments are talking about."

PROGRESS SLOW

Mr. Bennett also said there hadn't been much progress. But he noted constitutional change is bound to be a slow business; how slow he would not estimate.

Mr. Bennett's attorney-general, Leslie Peterson, said inflation should be tackled immediately. The constitution could come later.

Mr. Thatcher qualified his remark about not wanting to come to another conference by saying he meant another conference like the one that ended today.

Flat-Rate Basis Across Province

By BRUCE YEMEN

B.C. drivers are being told to expect a car insurance rate increase of $22 next year as a result of the compulsory liability coverage brought in by the provincial government.

That increase will be separate from any other rate jumps brought on by rising costs across the country. A rise of six per cent was predicted last week by Toronto insurance officials.

The cost of the compulsory B.C. insurance is being assessed on a flat-rate basis across the province.

An advertising campaign to acquaint insurance agents and members of the public with the impact of the new scheme is expected to begin shortly.

• • •

Radio commercials placed on behalf of the Insurance Bureau of Canada have set the increased costs at six cents a day or $21.90 a year.

This will cover inclusion of $50,000 in third-party liability insurance for injury or death and damage to property.

Failure to carry such insurance after Jan. 1 will cost drivers a fine of not less than $250.

A local insurance agent said today that no information about details of the new scheme has been provided yet.

The new system is based on the no-fault principle and provides compensation for injuries or death and property damage up to the $50,000 limit.

Larger coverage can be purchased at a cost which has not yet been disclosed.

Drivers with policies in force will be automatically covered under the new system until they renew their coverage in 1970.

• • •

The new scheme was introduced at the last session of the legislature with Attorney-General Leslie Peterson suggesting premium reductions of up to 25 per cent could result for some drivers.

Opposition critics at the time expressed doubt about that possibility and charged Peterson with deliberately neglecting to figure in the cost of collision coverage.

Collision coverage can still be purchased as before over and above the basic coverage.

Peterson hailed the no-fault coverage as giving the widest, most generous protection to accident victims that is available anywhere in Canada.

Motorcycle Gang Members Get Paddle, Prison Terms

CAMPBELL RIVER — Two members of a motorcycle gang Tuesday were sentenced to three strokes each of the paddle, a rarely-used punishment.

Alfred Ronald (Bubsie) Worthington, 20, was sentenced to 2½ years in the penitentiary and Terry Vernon Scott, 25, was given a three-year term in addition to the paddling after they were found guilty of robbery with violence.

★ ★ ★

Francis Vivian (Frank) Shaw, 19, was given an 18-month definite and two-year indeterminate sentence at Oakalla prison after being convicted of theft related to the same incident.

"Oh no," sobbed Mrs. Matt Worthington, her head falling forward on her knees, as the judge sentenced her son. Girls in the courtroom sobbed and a defence attorney hurried from the room as judgment was passed.

Worthington's lawyer, Victor Stephen of Courtenay, knocked over papers and furniture in his rush from the court. He told a reporter later he was so furious at the severity of the sentences he fled the room to avoid losing his temper.

★ ★ ★

Scott and Shaw are from Ontario and Worthington lives in Campbell River.

Michael Bailey, 18, of West Vancouver, who is employed as a cook in Gold River, laid the charges after being beaten and robbed of $124 in his Campbell River hotel room Oct. 9.

Bailey, chief witness during the two-day trial, said the cyclists had entered his hotel room in the

Paddle Preferable To Lash

The paddle as punishment for crime is rarely used but, for the liberals who shudder, the Criminal Code actually specifies whipping with the cat-o' nine tails.

Whipping could be part of a court sentence after conviction for a variety of offences, including rape, armed burglary, choking, drugging, robbery and indecent assault, city prosecutor Cory Stolte said today.

The Code says a court may sentence a convicted person to be whipped up to three times. Females are exempted.

In practice the lash has been retired for some time and the paddle substituted, a veteran police officer explained.

WITH HOLES

The paddle is made of leather with holes drilled in it.

The paddle is administered in a prison and in the presence of a doctor.

The officer described the procedure this way:

The offender is brought blindfolded into a special room where his trousers are lowered and he is strapped to a table.

FIRST STROKE

A guard delivers the specified number of strokes. The holes in the leather have the effect of producing "tremendous welts," with the first stroke. These welts burst and bleed with subsequent strokes.

"I've seen real hard-case criminals who say it's nothing but they don't sit down for a week.

"And I've seen where 10 strokes have been ordered but only five given and the other five held in abeyance, to be cancelled for good behavior. The man always turns immediately into a model prisoner."

He said he believes the paddle has not been ordered in a B.C. court for the past seven or eight years.

B.C. Joins Others In Condemning Talks

By JOHN MIKA

OTTAWA — A British Columbia delegate today fully agreed with Saskatchewan Premier Thatcher's stand that talking about constitutional matters is an unnecessary waste of time.

"That's exactly my feelings," said Industrial Development, Trade and Commerce Minister Waldo Skillings in a telephone interview.

"As far as I'm concerned the whole trouble with the federal government delegation is that they're lawyers.

"We'd get more done with more businessmen at these talks—like Premier Bennett and Premier Thatcher who get right down to the nitty-gritty, the real problems."

"We've had a constitution for the last 100 or 102 years and it's worked damn well.

TOO BRITISH

"The whole trouble is that I think the French people don't like BNA because it stands for British North America and I think personally they want a new constitution and new name for it to eliminate British connections."

Skillings said problems such as freight rates and overseas market difficulties should be discussed instead at major meetings of the federal and provincial governments.

He said the conference just ended accomplished little because it was open and tempted some of the participants to pump parochial politics.

GREAT MISTAKE

"Personally I think it's a great mistake to have public issues of such tremendous importance discussed in the open with television cameras and reporters present for the simple reason too many make political speeches.

"For example, take Ross Thatcher, I though he made some of the finest statements at the conference but they're talking about the next election to their people, on the television and other sessions.

"It was the same way with Premier Bertrand (of Quebec) and the new prime minister of Manitoba, all he was doing was trying to make an impact back on the prairies.

"The idea of these conferences should be to get together and solve problems but they become part of the problem as soon as they get here."

$5 Million Freighter Abandoned on Rocks

Salvage officials abandoned any hope of saving the 628-foot Greek freighter Treis Ierarchai at 10 a.m. today, adding her to the roll of ships claimed by the "graveyard of the Pacific."

The 16,000-ton, $5 million bulk carrier remained precariously lodged on jagged rocks at Ferrer Point, 70 miles north of Tofino.

Bruce McKay, dispatcher for Vancouver Tug and Barge Co. Ltd., who have had two tugs standing by, said:

"The situation is hopeless. It looks as if her back is broken. She's settled by the stern, her afterdecks are awash and the ship is split open at No. 3 hold from deck to bottom. All seven holds are flooded, as well as the engine room."

He added that rising southeasterly winds were expected to reach gale strength.

The captain and 28-man crew will be taken by special bus from Gold River to Vancouver Thursday morning.

Treis Ierarchai, owned by Diamond Freighters Corporation of Greece was bound from Japan to Crofton to load lumber when it ran aground Sunday.

Whut we really need is insurance against increases in insurance.

Easing of Rules Urged for Funds

TORONTO—Reduction of restrictions on mutual funds in Canada is recommended in a report released Tuesday by six civil servants who spent 30 months preparing their report.

The recommendations call for greater security for investors and steps to effectively reduce sales by American mutual fund companies in Canada.

Gordon E. Grundy, Ontario's superintendent of insurance and one-time president of the Studebaker Corp of Canada, headed the special provincial-federal committee.

After presenting the 240,000 word report, he said the main purpose of its recommendations is to lift restrictions on the industry as quickly as true competition in it can develop.

"We would like to see strong competition," Mr. Grundy said. "But full, true and plain disclosure, with the emphasis on plain, is a fundamental requirement."

His committee proposed some new regulations for mutual funds—a minimum capitalization, "surprise audits," reduced service charges and prohibition of insider trading.

But, in general it urged that price-fixing and other informal agreements which now bind the industry be banned, and such things as management fees be allowed to find their own level through the free play of the marketplace.

SHOULD KNOW MORE

The committee believes mutual fund shareholders should know much more about funds than they do now. Far more information should be available about relative positions of various funds, it said. Funds should issue semi-annual reports and simplified prospecti that shareholders can read and understand.

Mutual funds are companies which buy and manage portfolios of securities. Instead of buying shares of individual stocks investors buy shares in the mutual funds, which rise and fall according to the total performance of the holdings in the portfolio.

No specific incident led to the committee's formation. But a prime reason is believed to be general recognition that any industry which has grown as much as mutual funds—their assets increased five-fold since 1962 to about $3,400,000,000 last year—needs more regulation than at present.

The committee recommended that eventually mutual funds should be regulated by a national agency—probably a national securities commission. Meanwhile it hopes for uniform regulation of the funds across Canada through provincial commissions.

The committee also said the industry should police itself, although probably through a wider arm than the Canadian Mutual Funds Association, now the only organized spokesman for the industry, which has about one-third of the 136 funds in Canada as members.

CAUSE AN OUTFLOW?

The committee made no recommendation on one of the chief criticisms of the funds in recent years—that they invest so heavily in foreign securities that they have become responsible for a significant outflow of Canadian capital.

But it did recommend better investor protection by prohibiting sale of foreign-based mutual shares in Canada unless the fund's assets are held in custody here.

At present about 18 foreign-based funds sell shares in Canada. They do about 10 per cent of the industry's business.

The committee also proposed:

—Minimum assets of $100,000 for any fund selling shares to the public.

—Reduction of "front-end loading" charges by funds selling shares on instalments to a maximum of 30 per cent instead of the present 50 per cent, for the first 12 payments.

—Licensing salesmen to sell both insurance policies and mutual funds, something the insurance industry has been urging.

—Allowance of full refunds to investors who change their minds about buying mutual shares within a month, but heavier penalties for speculators who buy large blocks of shares and sell them within six months.

Mr. Grundy said he hopes a federal-provincial conference will be called to study the report. Ontario has already set up a study committee.

Other members of the federal-provincial committee were: Louis Gravel director of the Quebec government legal branch; W. S. Irwin of the British Columbia securities commission; Marc Lalonde, secretary to Prime Minister Trudeau; K. P. Lawton, legal adviser to the New Brunswick government, and G. H. Rose, chairman of the Alberta securities commission.

Planning Clinic For Families

A family planning clinic will be held in Victoria soon.

The Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health was informed Tuesday the Family Planning Association of B.C. has established a branch in Greater Victoria.

The branch asked for use of the board's treatment clinic one afternoon a week.

The board gave its approval without discussion.

company of his friend Kenneth Davies, 18, of Sooke, who was sharing the room temporarily.

Bailey said Scott and Worthington forced him to hand over his money, threw wine in his face, beat him up and smashed glasses over his skull.

Defence lawyers tried to prove Bailey had provoked the attack.

Much of Bailey's testimony was corroborated by Davies who was in the room, sitting in a corner watching.

Stephen and defence lawyer Leslie Cooper said they intend to appeal the sentences. Cooper said his appeal will require the approval of the B.C. Law Society as he is defending his clients, Shaw and Scott, under legal aid.

The trial of the trio was delayed last month when Worthington suffered a gunshot wound in Campbell River in an incident which has already sent two other men to prison.

News Media Probers Told Quality High

OTTAWA (CP) — A group of newspapers managing editors resisted suggestions Tuesday that publishers place more emphasis on the money-earning side of newspapers than on editorial content.

Representatives of the Canadian Managing Editors Conference told the special Senate committee on the news media that they believe journalistic quality is improving and Canadian readers are well served in comparison with other countries.

Senator J. Harper Prowse (L—Alberta) drew a contrast between what he described as "the well-oiled machine" of the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association, which functions to bring in money through newspaper advertising, and the loosely-organized association of managing editors, the men with the main responsibility for the information that appears in newspapers.

The managing editors had testified that they have no continuing organization beyond an annual conference, no full-time staff and their budget is about $1,500 a year.

Senator Prowse said he is struck by the contrast with the substantial financial resources of CDNPA, which appeared earlier Tuesday.

SET OWN POLICY

Ivor Williams, conference president and managing editor of the London Free Press, said the editorial aims mentioned by Senator Prowse are more a matter for individual newspapers than for the conference.

Robert D. Owen, conference past president and editor on the Kingston Whig-Standard, said interest in news content is as strong among newspapers as interest in getting advertising revenue.

The fact that the managing editors conference does not spend as much money as CDNPA is meaningless, he said, because they play different roles. He was sure the publishers would rescue the conference financially if the managing editors required more funds.

Newspapers today are much more seriously concerned with presenting better information than they were a few years ago, he said. Readers demanded more news and better quality, probably partly because of the advent of television.

Officer Hit By Auto— Escape Fails

VANCOUVER (CP) — Robert L. O'Conner, 33, was charged Tuesday with criminal negligence and possession of narcotics for the purpose of trafficking after an RCMP drug investigator was bowled over by an escape car Monday night.

Police said two detectives and an RCMP officer found two bundles each containing 25 capsules hidden under a tire in a basement garage.

The officers staked out the house and watched a suspect come out, get in his car and "hit the gas."

The car hit one officer on the left side and spun him around. The officer fired two shots into the left back wheel, stopping the car.

Labor Unrest Appears in Cape Breton

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — Labor Minister T. J. McKeough of Nova Scotia was expected to fly back from Ottawa today as labor unrest among Cape Breton construction workers spread to include other workers.

About 1,000 workers milled around a shopping centre parking lot near a public housing construction site, a key project in the dispute that sent 4,000 men out on a wildcat strike Dec. 3

Police, including some 30 RCMP reinforcements flown in from Halifax Tuesday, patrolled the housing site. There were no incidents.

The workers earlier paraded through principal city streets soaked by steady rain.

Among the marchers were civic workers, employees of a bottling firm and some from the General Instrument Corp. plant on the outskirts of the city.

Final Parade For Venture

Friday will see the last class of officer candidates receive their commissions at the 15-year-old Venture school in HMC Dockyard.

Forty-eight newly-commissioned officers will be on parade.

The inspecting officer will be Capt. Godfrey H. Hayes, chief of staff logistics for Maritime Command Pacific.

The school, operating as the Canadian Forces Officer Candidate School since 1966, will be phased out Friday and move to CFB Chilliwack as part of a base-consolidation program.

Many of the staff of 60 will be moved to the mainland base.

Friday's parade will begin at 10:30 a.m.

Cab Fare Boost Bid Rejected By Committee

Victoria city's finance committee Tuesday turned down a bid by some taxicab companies to increase fares.

Cab owners and drivers appeared before the committee in two groups, one arguing for the fare increase, the other solidly against an increase.

Kenneth Nordal, owner of C and C Taxi, Victoria's largest cab company, said an increase in fares was essential if drivers are to be paid an equitable wage.

Richard Bloomfield of Bluebird Cabs countered with the claim that the existing tariff is high enough and that any increase could only harm the industry.

Nordal and his supporters stated that the top wage paid a cab driver was $1.75 an hour and that tips were negligible.

Bloomfield listed a $1.87 as the minimum wage and in excess of $2 the maximum hourly rate. And he claimed that tips averaged at least $3 a day.

MORE CONTROL

Though opposed on fares, both groups agreed that Victoria's no-cruising rule should remain in effect and both endorsed a suggestion that the number of cabs be controlled more strictly in future.

One of the problems in the cab business, they stated, was that during the past three years 25 new licences have been granted.

City manager Dennis Young asked both groups if they would like to see the growth of taxis controlled and geared to a population basis.

They agreed that they would.

There are 84 cabs operating in the city at present, more than enough to satisfy customer demand.

MORE CABS

If controls for expansion are introduced, additional cabs would be added for each 5,000 growth in population.

Existing cab rates in Victoria see the customer charged 80 cents for the first quarter mile and 10 cents for each additional quarter mile. The taxi owners seeking an increase were requesting 80 cents for the first one-fifth of a mile and 10 cents for each additional fifth of a mile.

The rejection of the bid was unanimous.

Freight Rate Hike Deferred

REGINA (CP) — Proposed freight rate increases for potash by Canadian National Railways and the Canadian Pacific Railway have been postponed to Feb. 20, attorney-general D. V. Heald of Saskatchewan announced today.

The 54-cents-a-ton increase to $8.91 a ton was scheduled to go into effect Dec. 22 but was protested strongly by the provincial government.

Spawn Dug Up; Man Fined $1,000

GIBSONS (CP)—William Howard Shaw, a shovel operator, was fined a total of $1,000 Tuesday when he appeared in provincial court on two charges in connection with the killing of spawning salmon and eggs near here.

Shaw was stringing a water main across Roberts Creek last week for his employer, H. B. Contracting Ltd. of Surrey, when residents complained of destruction.

One charge was laid under Section 30 of the Fisheries Act dealing with destruction of eggs and gravel used by salmon for spawning.

The other was under Section 42 of the B.C. Fisheries Regulations that forbids killing or molesting salmon in streams or lakes.

Gibsons is 20 miles northwest of Vancouver.

Meeting Called

REGINA (CP) — The fatal shooting by police of a 19-year-old city youth as he apparently tried to escape arrest has prompted the local council of the John Howard Society to call a special meeting to discuss the implications of the incident. Nick Mjazyk was killed by one of two bullets that struck him.

Parley Made Progress—PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau says the federal-provincial constitutional conference which ended today has made progress "and I am confident that progress will continue."

He told reporters at the end of the session that the meetings covered every item on the agenda. Although most were referred for further study, this was to be expected. He said that technical details have to be studied further by officials before decisions can be made on articles to go in a new constitution.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Back many decades ago when much of our lumber came from farmers and most of it was produced from trees that were chopped down in the cold of winter, lumber didn't warp very much after it was built into a building.

The farmers knew that the winter coldness, the dormant state of the trees and the wintertime state of tree sap all combined to bring about a better seasoning of wood. Then, lumbermen began to scientifically season the wood, which often included kiln drying. Some people may think kiln-dried wood is just as warp-free as the old-time lumber that was cut and seasoned over a period of many months. I think they are wrong.

I had a barn built with four beams, each eight inches by 12 inches. The beams were kiln-dried and, by the way, they cost a pretty penny. Now, three years later, the ends of two of the beams are twisting, warped as far as the metal straps will let them go. Long-seasoned lumber probably would not have warped under the same conditions.

. . . CAR INSURANCE

Death and injury benefits are based on the age and status of victims. For instance, the head of a household being killed in a car accident (or dying within 180 days as a result of injuries) would result in a payment of $5,000.

In a case where the survivors include a spouse and two children the payments would total $14,720.

A legislative proposal to eliminate the right to sue for damage to property exceeding $250 has been held back by the government for a second look.

The proposal was passed by the legislature but doesn't come into force until it is proclaimed by the government.

Air Canada Hits New Fare Pact

MONTREAL (CP) — An agreement to lower many air fares between North America and Europe concluded by the International Air Transport Association in Caracas Tuesday does not go far enough, Air Canada said today.

The Canadian Crown corporation said in a statement it was accepting the new agreement "only with the deepest reluctance" because "the proposals do not go as far as necessary to make inexpensive air travel available to the general public."

Representatives of 43 major airlines agreed on the new fares, to take effect March 1, 1970, at a three-week meeting in Caracas, Venezuela.

To qualify for the new group fares, persons must have belonged to an organization formed for purposes other than travel for at least six months prior to departure, an Air Canada spokesman said.

Air Canada had proposed special low fares for any group of 80 or more persons whether they belonged to such an organization or not.

But the company said its proposals met resistance from other governments and airlines.

The new group fares for a round-trip between Montreal and London will range from $165 in the winter season to $236 in the peak summer period. Toronto-London fares will range adoption of its proposed low fares at an IATA rates meeting in Honolulu next fall.
from $187 to $257 and the Victoria - London rate will range from $291 to $362 return, the company said.

The 14-28 day excursion rate will be the same as the existing 14-21 day rates.

The new 29-45 day excusion fare between Montreal and London will be $252 in the winter season and $301 in the peak summer period, Air Canada said.

The Toronto-London rate will be $293 to $342 and the Victoria-London rate will be $403 to $452.

Air Canada said it will pursue

Ottawa Calls Sasquatch Film 'Hoax'

OTTAWA (CP) — Scientists at the national museum are still convinced that the Sasquatch—North America's abominable snowman—is a hoax.

After seeing a film designed to prove the existence of the eight-foot, hairy animal, Philip Youngman, chief mammologist at the museum, said: "It's a hoax, no question."

He said the creature on the screen walked too much like a human to have the kind of non-human footprint in plaster casts allegedly made from footprints in the snow.

The film was shot by Roger Patterson, a native of Washington, and was shown to reporters and scientists here by John Green of Agassiz.

Green, son of former Conservative external affairs minister Howard Green, has written a book about the sasquatch and is trying to raise funds to promote an extensive search.

He challenged Youngman with: "How can you say these footprints are a fake?"

"I don't know how they can fake it," Youngman replied, "but I'm convinced this movie and these footprints are fake. . . . One of our scientists claims you could see a human heel under the skin of the creature as it walked."

Green said the museum should invest time and money to help solve the problem.

Youngman disagreed. "I wouldn't want to waste money on such an expedition. . . . There are many more worthwhile projects."

Second Protest Against Police

REGINA (CP) — For the second consecutive night, a crowd of demonstrators gathered outside the city police station Tuesday night to protest the fatal shooting Monday of a youth police said was trying to escape arrest.

About 50 persons marched back and forth in front of the station carrying placards protesting the death of Nick Mjazyk, 19, of Regina.

Most of the demonstrators Tuesday night were younger than the Monday night crowd which consisted primarily of persons in their late teens or early 20s. Like Monday night, the second demonstration lasted about two hours and there were no incidents requiring police attention.

LOOT FOUND

Police said Mjazyk was killed by one of two police bullets that struck him. Three shots were fired by police, Mjazyk and a companion were found to be unarmed.

The shooting occurred about 1 a.m. Monday when plainclothes constables Henry Klassen and Orville Nichols stopped Mjazyk and Kenneth Pells, 23, also of Regina, as they left a vacant house in the city's southwest distrct.

Police had been keeping the house under 24-hour surveillance since Friday night when a "considerable amount" of loot from the holdup Friday of a nearby Canada Safeway Ltd. store was found in the basement of the house.

The police said they identifed themselves and told Mjazyk and Pells to remain where they were. Mjazyk apparently tried to run away and was shot. It was not disclosed which constable fired or if both had.

AUTOPSY

An autopsy was performed Monday and coroner J. M. Leboldus ordered an inquest for Dec. 22. Funeral services for Mjazyk were held today.

Police said Mjazyk was found to be carrying some of the money from the Safeway holdup but that he could not have been directly involved because he was in jail when it occurred.

Pells appeared in city magistrate's court Tuesday and was released on $2,000 bail on a charge of armed robbery. He is to appear Tuesday, Dec. 16.

A group of about 15 persons handed out leaflets at a city council meeting Tuesday in protest of the shooting.

CNTU Says Shipyard Aid Cash Wasted

MONTREAL (CP) — Federal aid to Canadian shipbuilders, in its present form, is money poured down the drain, the Confederation of National Trade Unions said Tuesday.

In a brief to the federal committee looking into the state of Canada's shipbuilding industry, the labor organization said the problem is not a lack of money.

Since 1961 the federal government had provided about $234,524,000 in direct and indirect aid, but in the form of short-term handouts similar to welfare payments, to keep the shipyards going on a hand-to-mouth basis.

The CNTU recommended the establishment of a federal commission, responsible to the industry department, to promote the modernization of the industry.

It said Canadian shipbuilders cannot hope to compete with such giants in the field as Sweden, Japan and England unless, as in those countries, numerous small shipyards are consolidated into a few large companies.

Such consolidation, along with generous government subsidies, would permit the technological modernization of the industry.

The CNTU said the establishment of a Canadian merchant marine would be an important factor in the growth of Canadian shipyards, but "only if they are competitive internationally."

Inspection Needed

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A coroner's jury in this Vancouver suburb Monday recommended that licence plates be issued only to vehicles that have passed a mechanical inspection. The jury was hearing evidence into the death Nov. 22 of Herbert Lockstein, 53, of nearby Surrey killed when hit by a motorcycle.

UN Pleads For USC Help In Mid-East

Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova's current appeal for funds is more urgent this year because of heavy demands on her organization.

In November, the director of the Unitarian Service Committee received a request from the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees to take over two of the agency's Middle East projects.

In July, secretary-general of the UN, U Thant, summed up the UNRWA's predicament like this:

SERIOUS

"The deficit of the UNRWA budget is extremely serious. If voluntary contributions, on which the UNRWA must depend for the financing of its operations, do not increase—and there are at present no indications that they will—the agency's already limited working capital will be dangerously depleted.

"By 1970 its financial situation will become so critical that it will have no alternative but to reduce drastically its services to the refugees with all the dire consequences which such a reduction will entail."

With a copy of these words came descriptions of two UNRWA projects and an earnest plea to Dr. Hitschmanova to take them over.

One is the Balata Health Centre serving 10,000 refugees on the west bank of the Jordan River. The general clinic and infant health clinic costs $15,600 a year to operate. In 1968, 81,613 visits were recorded at the health centre.

COST $17,400

The second is the Jerusalem Health Centre in the centre of that city serving 30,000 refugees. Its annual operating costs are $17,400. In 1968 it had 84,898 visitors.

Dr. Hitschmanova cannot help these people unless Canadians help her.

Donations can be sent to the Times, 2631 Douglas and clothing can be dropped at 2333 Government.

Forces Head Named

OTTAWA (CP) — Colonel G. H. Sellar, 46, of Calgary, has been appointed commander designate of the Canadian Forces Base Europe which is to be located in Lahr, West Germany, effective in January, the defence department announced today.

Under the reorganization of Canada's NATO forces in Europe, land elements at the Canadian Forces Base Soest, West Germany, will move to Lahr next summer. Col. Sellar has been commander at the Soest base since last July.

CFB Europe will house units of the 5,000-man Canadian Forces Europe which is being formed in 1970 to replace the present 1st Canadian Air Division and 4th Canadian Mechanized Brigade Group assigned to NATO.

Rock Concert Organizers Face Suit

LIVERMORE, Calif. (AP) — Angry ranchers say they plan lawsuits for $500,000 for damages they claim to have suffered from the weekend Alatmont rock music concert, where four youths died.

In addition, Alameda County Supervisors voted Tuesday to start proceedings to revoke the permit of Dick Carter, operator of the Altamont Speedway, who invited the Rolling Stones and other musicians to perform there.

More than 300,000 flocked to the 80-acre speedway Saturday after two other locations turned down the concert.

C. W. Tripp, spokesman for an indignant group of ranchers, said they had authorized a lawyer to file suits totalling $500,000 against Carter, the California Northwest Capital Co. of Eureka, Calif.—owner of the speedway—and at least eight rock groups, including the Stones.

Lawyer to Visit Massacre Scene

FORT BENNING, Ga. (CP) — The defence lawyer for army Lieut. William L. Calley, charged with mass murder in My Lai, Vietnam, said Tuesday night he will conduct the first American fact-finding mission at the scene of My Lai sometime after Jan. 1.

Kenneth A. Raby said no specific date had been set but he would have to be back here by Jan. 20 to present a petition to trial judge Lt.-Col. Reid Kennedy asking that charges against Calley be dropped. Calley, 26, has been charged with murdering 109 South Vietnamese civilians when the U.S. army moved into My Lai.

Raby said he would be accompanied on the government-financed trip to Quang Ngai province by army trial counsel Capt. Aubrey Daniel, the prosecutor in the Calley case.

The only other official investigation of My Lai village was Dec. 1, when South Vietnamese legislators, led by Senator Tran Van Don, quizzed civilians who lived in the My Lai hamlet at the time of the alleged massacre in March, 1968.

Meanwhile in Washington, a congressional subcommittee continued its closed-door investigation of the alleged massacre by interviewing U.S. army officers. Capt. Ernest L. Medina, commander of the army company involved in the incident, attended the session Tuesday but did not testify.

Gen. William C. Westmoreland, army chief of staff, said at Charlotte, N.C., Tuesday night there is no justification for killing women and children in a war zone "unless they were armed and served as combatants."

Judge Refuses Autopsy Order

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — A Pennsylvania judge refused today to order the body of Mary Jo Kopechne exhumed for an autopsy.

It was a victory for the parents of the 28-year-old secretary who died last summer in Senator Edward M. Kennedy's car. Common Pleas Judge Bernard C. Brominski, after seven weeks of consideration, denied the petition of a Massachusetts district attorney who plans an inquest.

Brominski said the facts presented by District Attorney Edmund Dinis of New Bedford, Mass., "are insufficient to support a finding of the cause of death" other than drowning.

In his 14-page opinion, the judge said that after two days of testimony it was difficult for him to conclude that Miss Kopechne's grave should be disturbed.

He said that if Dinis had any evidence that might prove the need for an autopsy "it has not been presented here."

The Massachusetts inquest has been delayed pending this ruling.

CONSIDERED PARENTS

Brominski said he took into consideration the vigorous objection by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kopechne, of Berkeley Heights, N.J.

"While their disapproval is not an absolute bar to an exhumation and autopsy," Brominski said, "in view of the facts presented to this court their objections are well taken."

Joseph F. Flanagan, the Kopechne lawyer, said he was "very happy with the decision."

"We feel the family's position has been fully vindicated and their feeling that there should be no autopsy was justified."

The judge also said that the presence of blood in Miss Kopechne's nose and mouth and on her clothing, as noted by Dinis at the hearing, did not provide sufficient doubt to warrant exhumation.

Brominski noted that medical and chemical experts said that this kind of blood residue is consistent with death by drowning.

"Even if we assume that an autopsy would reveal a broken neck or any other bone in the body, a fractured skull, the rupture of an internal organ, none of these would be incompatible with the manner in which this accident occurred," he said.

"To consider any other cause of death at this time would give loose reign to speculation unsupported by any medical facts of record."

The judge said that in reviewing the testimony of Dr. Donald Mills, the assistant Massachusetts medical examiner who ruled death was due to drowning, and Dr. Werner Spitz, a Baltimore pathologist called by the Kopechnes, it "leads to a conclusion that supports the original finding of the cause of death."

HAS NO COMMENT

Reached by telephone at his home in New Bedford, Mass., Dinis offered only a quick "no comment," then hung up.

In Edgartown, Mass., District Court Judge James A. Boyle, before whom the inquest is to be held, made himself unavailable for comment.

It was Boyle who delayed starting the inquest until after Brominski's decision.

Miss Kopechne died on the night of July 18, when Kennedy drove his sedan off a narrow bridge and into a pond on Chappaquiddick Island, off the coast of Massachusetts near Martha's Vineyard.

An assistant medical examiner who made only an external examination ruled then the 28-year-old secretary had drowned. Three days after the accident she was buried in Larksville, not far from where she was born in northeastern Pennsylvania's hard coal region.

Give the most accurate watch in the world.

What accounts for this extraordinary accuracy? Instead of the usual wheels and springs, Accutron has a tiny, electronically-driven tuning fork whose vibrations split each second into 360 precise little intervals. Ordinary watches have balance wheels. The balance wheel splits the second, too. Into 5 or 10 intervals. And not so precisely. That's why balance wheel watches can't compete with tuning fork time.

Because of that tuning fork, we can guarantee Accutron accuracy to within a minute a month*.

The Pro-Canadian Vote

AS HAS FREQUENTLY BEEN the case when federal and provincial leaders get together, the conference in Ottawa has served mainly as a showcase for differing views, or a preliminary sparring match for a main bout yet to come. Those who expected concrete decisions to come out of the talks will have been disappointed — but there can be few who still see the gatherings in this light.

As Prime Minister Trudeau explained again to the questioning press, these are occasions for provincial leaders to assess positions without committing themselves, to gauge the national climate without closing doors. Proposals and protests go to working groups for analysis and codification, and out of this will come, some day, the definitive motions for amendment of the Canadian constitution.

Under the best of conditions, this would be a complicated and lengthy process, for national constitutions must be designed for universal approval and as great a degree of permanence as possible. But in a land of such diverse racial, regional and economic elements as Canada, and particularly at a time when the whole principle of our nationality is being questioned in some quarters, the eventual emergence of an acceptable constitution will be something of a phenomenon.

The meetings which ended today have demonstrated again that the provinces can come together in opposing federal powers. On the first day of the talks it was Quebec that appeared to be out on its own in asserting provincial demands, with always the threat of separatism lurking in the wings. But on Tuesday, when discussion bore down on federal proposals for welfare measures and plans for direct government-to-citizen aid, the provinces found a familiar unity in opposition.

What did become clear, at least so far as the premiers were concerned, was a strong Western protest against Ottawa's concentration on Eastern problems. In view of the crucial nature of the Quebec situation in recent times, and the active threat to Confederation which has been expressed there, this concentration was understandable. But the emergency posed by French Canada looms less urgent in Prairie eyes than the mounting problems of urbanization, wheat surpluses, freight rates, unemployment and future development. And so persistent an Ottawa-fighter as Mr. Bennett could hardly be expected to play second fiddle to Prairie protests.

But the widely publicized expressions of Western separatist sentiment are another thing entirely. Saskatchewan's Mr. Thatcher, a political wolf in more than one party sheep-fold, declared that talk of separatism in the West was much more than an idle threat. But while it is true that there are a number of pressing complaints in the Western provinces, the premiers are inclined to try to get more political milage out of the situation than is warranted.

There has been little if any attempt to assess with any exactitude the prospects of a Prairie province, or a group of them, adrift in the heartland of North America as a separate sovereign state. There has been even less attempt to determine with any accuracy the real flavor of public opinion in this regard. The betting is that any Western premier who went to the people on an issue of withdrawal from Confederation would find himself confronted with so many adverse votes by Canadians that he would disappear overnight from the political scene. That issue has not yet been put to the test. It is not likely to be.

Symphony Dollars

Montreal Gazette

The Montreal Symphony Orchestra is making its annual appeal to the public for funds. The orchestra requires $326,000 to meet expenses of $1,878,500.

The public should first of all realize that few symphonic orchestras can survive if forced to rely solely on market conditions. The MSO's earned income is little more than half of the amount it needs to sustain its existence. Without substantial public donations, it would and will cease to exist.

Nor is there any apparent way of reducing the deficits. If an orchestra is to keep first-class musicians it must operate at a level which competes both in the number of works it performs and in the standards it attains with comparable orchestras in other major cities.

The question is: Should Montrealers continue to sustain a symphony orchestra which each year is forced to run up a considerable deficit?

It may be hoped that Montrealers will answer in the affirmative. The Montreal Symphony Orchestra has existed now for some 35 years. During that period it has struggled constantly not only with problems of finance but with the task of growing into an orchestra of quality and polish. Orchestras require many years of continuous existence to develop excellence.

Now that it has been achieved here, it would be unfortunate if Montrealers indifferently let their orchestra disband for lack of funds.

HOLDING A SCATTERED PEOPLE TOGETHER

The White Paper Is Negotiable, If We Keep Our Heads

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

AS he knows better than anyone else, it is risky to exaggerate the genius of Prime Minister Trudeau. That he has by far the ablest mind in our contemporary politics few Canadians can doubt. But the popular notion that he has all the answers and makes no mistakes is denied not only by Mr. Trudeau himself but by his obvious failure to answer certain big questions in the West and by his egregious mistakes in trying to answer them. The greatest mistake of all, it seems to me, is the mismanagement of the white paper on taxation — not because this document proposes unwise reforms, not because it proposes higher taxes for some persons and less for others, but because in the manner of its presentation, it provides a lightning rod for all the discontents of the West, real and imagined, a handy weapon for every crackpot between the Great Lakes and the Pacific.

Hutchison

No one, of course, fully understands the entire fine print in the white paper, not even the men who wrote it and will soon rewrite it. Supposing, however, for the sake of argument, that a perfectly equitable tax system is built, the first in human history, still that result will not solve Mr. Trudeau's problem in the West. For the problem is not really financial or economic. It is political in the strictest meaning of the word. It is the old problem of reconciling and uniting the Canadian polity, of holding a scattered disparate people together.

In Eastern Canada Mr. Trudeau recognized that problem from the start and was elected mainly because the people thought he could solve it more effectively than any alternative leader. Dealing with Quebec, he thoroughly understood its mind and, more important, its instincts, since he shared them as a French Canadian. He defended Quebec's sound aspirations and denounced its follies with courage and a sure touch as no English-speaking leader could do.

Clearly he has not yet learned to understand the West in the same terms. He may understand it intellectually, he has all the surface facts and figures, but he does not share its instincts, its visceral (and often foolish) reactions, its nature quite unlike that of the East.

How could he as an easterner? The surprising thing, indeed, is that he has learned so much about the West in the last year or two after his original mistake of sheer ignorance in telling the prairie farmers to sell their own wheat (contrary to the laws of his own government).

Building Antagonism

He has learned a good deal but not enough, apparently, to foresee that his white paper, no matter how just and wise, would bitterly antagonize a large group, perhaps a majority, throughout the West. And in politics that is a very serious risk to run, especially for a prime minister whose whole life and talents are dedicated to the nation's unity.

Mr. Trudeau need not worry, I think, about the lunatic fringe, the remnant of an imaginary Wild West, which begins to talk of separation from Canada, since that fringe is as narrow as it is noisy. But he will have to worry about the sane centre of opinion which evidently believes that the white paper, with its penalties on small business and the so-called middle class, will favor the industrial heartland of Ontario and Quebec as against the developing western frontier.

Cost of Division

He will also have to recognize (as no doubt he does already) that no reform of taxes, no theory of economics, no doctrine of social equity, no policy of any sort whatever is worth the cost of further dividing the basic geographical and mental compartments of the nation.

Among these the West, even though it is divided within itself, forms a distinct compartment, made so by its geography, its history and its special living ways. To be sure, the growing anger in the West, much of it ill-informed and some of it promoted by local politicians to win cheap votes, will not break the nation. But it could break Mr. Trudeau as a successful leader of the nation if he mismanaged it.

In the end, I venture to predict, he will not mismanage it. This man is too able, too sensitive and altogether too intelligent to make the final mistake of quarrelling, beyond hope of reconciliation, with the West, as John Diefenbaker quarrelled with Quebec and, by that mistake alone, ensured his own destruction.

Therefore, in the area where the white paper is intolerable to the West (or to any other of the basic compartments) it will have to be changed. The changes probably will be rather drastic before we are finished.

They must accept not only the fact that the West has some valid grievances, especially against the national tariff system, but the fact that the whole nation is basically middle-class, bourgeois in its attitudes, pretty selfish as well and not a Just Society of angels.

Such facts may not be pleasant to reformers, they may be deplored by all idealists, they may irritate an impatient leader like Mr. Trudeau, but they are the facts of politics. He must live with them if he is to live as a leader at all.

Supreme Imperative

Mr. Trudeau may live in office for a long time yet, having become a fact of Canadian life himself. If so, he will push his ideals of pure equity, contained in the white paper and elsewhere, just as far as he can but no farther than the politics of national unity, the supreme imperative, allow at any given time.

At the present time they would seem to allow most of the proposed tax reforms but not all. This need not alarm us, or Mr. Trudeau, unduly. The contents of Pandora's taxation box are beyond the ordinary man's comprehension but they are negotiable, if the nation keeps its head and remembers that it is the most fortunate nation in the world.

Where the Money Comes From

THE ARGUMENT IN THE DISpute between the West Vanver school board, and its teachers who announced they would boycott compulsory arbitration of wage schedules for next year, deserves wider consideration than by the trustees and teachers concerned in the local difference.

"Our stand," says Glen Hannah, president of the West Vancouver teachers association, "is not so much a protest against the arbitration procedure as it is an expression of genuine concern about cutbacks the board has proposed in the educational program of the district . . . We are protesting the board's refusal to meet with us to discuss proposed actions we sincerely believe will lower the quality of education in West Vancouver."

The school board has indicated that the money for salary increases will have to come from cutbacks in other areas of the board's budget. The board apparently takes the stand that there is a limit to the amount of money it can raise from the taxpayers who elected its members. A significant part of its revenue must go to pay teachers. When that amount is increased through upward revision of salaries, less is left to care for other costs of running schools.

The decision places a hard alternative before the teachers. They have to decide to forego, in part at least, their salary increase demands, or, by standing firm on them, to see the cutbacks "lower the quality of education in West Vancouver."

Obviously, what is spent on teachers' salaries cannot go toward the purchase of data-processing or other equipment. This is a fact confronting West Vancouver teachers whose salary schedule for 1969 ran from a low of $4,825 to a high of $12,615.

No Jumbo Bargains on Jumbo Jets?

MANY TRAVELLERS ANTICIpated jolly bargains with the advent of jumbo jets but it appears that once again we are applying old habits to new technology. One seating arrangement in the new jets would allow nearly 500 passengers to an airplane. With the additional space however, airlines seem determined to enlarge the distinction between first-class and tourist passengers.

A large American airline will receive the first of the big planes, and its seating arrangement seems likely to set a pattern for other airlines. Aside from even roomier seats, only first class passengers will benefit from the plane's most interesting feature — its double-deck design. The upper-deck lounge, connected to the first class seating area by a spiral staircase, has a bar, easy chairs and a small sofa.

People who can afford and want these amenities have a perfect right to them. But the jumbo jet was designed as an economical air-bus. And if one assumes—as the airlines do—that the number of air travellers will continue to expand into the foreseeable future, then the large jet probably represents the cheapest way to carry them.

The plane travels slightly faster than today's jets, and with its greater seating capacity, achieves savings from relatively low labor and fuel costs. One jumbo jet manufacturer estimates that costs per passenger (with large loads) will be 20 to 30 per cent below those of today's jets. But luxury space will cut down on these savings by raising the unit cost of the payload.

Poor Taste

At the outset I shall state that I am not a Roman Catholic. However, I certainly thought that it was in very poor taste to refer to a member of the clergy by surname only. Page 46 of the December 6 newspaper records the death of the Rev. Father Jan Planeta. Do you not agree that it would be more in keeping with the high standard of this publication to have prefixed his surname with the customary Reverend, Father or even a simple Mister?

Simple errors of the reporters certainly downgrade this publication.—Dona A. Atkinson, 4526 Eva.

Septic Tanks

Not on behalf of Victoria SPEC, but as an individual who was present at their Dec. 3 meeting, I must take issue with Dr. J. L. Whitbread in his comments as reported in the Times of Dec 4.

Dr. Whitbread says, in effect, "Hang the septic tanks—go for sewers!" I am all for replacing septic tanks with sewers, with some reservations about what we do with sewage. I am sure most SPEC members will feel the same. The worthy doctor knows perfectly well, however, that hundreds of local septic tanks will not be replaced by sewers for many years. He must also be aware that many noisome ditches bear lively testimony to the fact that a lot of those septic tanks are not functioning properly. He must also agree that the exposed sewage is neither healthy nor pleasant for those exposed to it. Surely he should be the last to quarrel with SPEC's wish to see these situations cleaned up now rather than leave them all until some indefinite date when sewers finally come along.

Dr. Whitbread is quoted as saying that "It is ridiculous for us to check every septic tank — we just don't have the staff." I'm sure he doesn't have the staff at present, but he is the very man who should welcome better control over a health problem and legislation that would bring with it the needed staff.

The doctor takes SPEC to task for not having publicly supported the View Royal and Central Saanich sewer referendums. These were discussed at the meeting, and the tone was one of support. However, Victoria SPEC is only a month old, and as its president, Dick Chudley, pointed out, these referendums come at a moment when Victoria SPEC has simply not had time to acquire the facts that are required to back a fully informed statement. This responsible outlook is to be commended — not poo-poohed. I can't speak for SPEC, but I'm inclined to think Dr. Whitbread would be welcomed at a SPEC meeting to present some of these facts.

In the meantime we do have an ongoing septic tank problem, and it ill befits him to reject this attempt to do something about it.—J. W. Underhill, 1439 Wende Rd.

Biafran Christmas

Christmas, as we observe it, has seemed something less than real for the past few years.

But this Christmas seems more filled with folly than all the rest put together.

Here we are in our comfortable world, reaching for new heights in affluence. Personalized, transistorized electric bathmats with step-control softness-selector (batteries extra) for the dad who has everything.

We're ready to rush out and buy more of the same incredible junk than we did last year.

It's too much.

Stanley Burke changed all that for me. His recounting over CBC radio of experiences and sights on a recent trip to Biafra, in which he was almost totally overcome with emotion, gave me sobering second thoughts.

I've sent my Christmas money to Interpax, Toronto, in the hope that it might save the life of one starving child in Biafra.

Three wind-up toys for a surfeited child or a slight swelling of nutrition in the belly of an almost dead African child? There's only one choice.

A reply to a letter to our prime minister from one of his secretaries sounded like something from Mitchell Sharp's office. How statesmanlike is our government in discussing assistance to the dying in Biafra?

How wonderful it would be if our government could be led in our relations with the hopeless and troubled of the world by men of emotion and charity instead of consummate statesmen who think only of policy, formalities and the legal decencies.

With some warm hearted and demanding leadership this country could lead the world in denying ourselves thoughtless affluence and luxury and giving to those who need our helping hand.

We might even be able to do something for those in Canada who need help in surviving. But we need the leadership. We might even inspire the world, at the risk of putting a few electric bathmat manufacturers out of business.

Our hope is not the coming generation, it is rather what we can do now, as individuals, by contacting our leaders and putting our money where our sympathy is. Our time is running out. — "Over 30".

Protest

The Canadian televiewing audience is being thoroughly gypped. All that it's getting for its tax dollars is a bunch of ads and some much-interrupted inferior programs.

CBC did not even have the sense to buy the Forsyte Saga, and Twelfth Night was interspersed every second by MacMillan Bloedel ads — interesting enough in themselves but not when they interrupt Shakespeare.

It's time there were loud protests. Personally I never buy a thing advertised on TV and I bet there are a whole lot of angry people like me.—Gwen Cash, 350 Douglas St.

No Chargex?

I was recently involved in a car accident that will cost me approximately $200. My insurance is $100 deductible.

I went to one of our well-known banks. Honestly you would have thought I had asked for the Crown jewels. The bank official even wanted to know what my grandfather did for a living. I am 59, my grandfather died in 1921. I live in a rather nice house and probably have $16,000 equity, also the car involved.

After an inquiry of two days I was told I could have the cash, if I would take home a large document and get my wife to sign it. How degrading!—S. H. Radley, 835 Parklands.

Vietnam Has Been a Bad Place for U.S. Illusions

By RUSSELL BAKER
The New York Times

It will not be surprising if in time the massacre at Pinkville is rationalized to the satisfaction of a political majority.

The explanations are already present in embryo. War is hell. The strain of combat. Isolated incident not consistent with official policy.

Look at the Spanish Revolution. Look at the British at Culloden, Calcutta, Dublin. Look at the French in the Fronde and Algeria.

The explanations and justifications that will be made may be flimsy. But they are likely to serve the purpose for Americans, like all other nations, are not going to tolerate a sustained attack against faith in their own excellence.

Nations Live by Them

Nations, like people, also live by their illusions. Strip a man of all his illusions, and you destroy him. The hero of "Midnight Cowboy" catches a terrifying glimpse of the possibility when he confronts the fading East Side matron with the reality that she is no longer "still a gorgeous chick." Her hysteria so frightens him that he gives her the last of his bankroll to preserve her illusion.

Nations are like that, only more so. There are some illusions they will not surrender, and they may destroy those who try to take them away. One such illusion, fundamental to nearly all great states, is the notion of moral excellence.

For nearly 25 years now we have attempted to persuade the Germans that they have an obligation to atone for behaving like our moral inferiors from 1933 to 1945.

This exercise in persuading a whole people to acquiesce in mass guilt has not been noticeably successful among Germans. Nor is it likely to be among Americans if they are called upon to accept guilt for atrocities in Vietnam.

It is a rare person who is willing to believe in his own indecency, and he is probably in need of psychotherapy. The illusion of our fundamental decency as a people may run even deeper among Americans than among most Westerners.

As much as anything, this probably accounts for the success of Messrs. Nixon's and Agnew's campaign to rally "the silent majority" against dissenters and the news media. The dissenters have been trying to persuade us that we are behaving loathsomely in Vietnam. The news media, concentrating on the crisis of the 1960's, show us blacks accusing us of hypocrisy and students protesting that we are corrupt.

Goodness Uncelebrated

Messrs. Nixon and Agnew are telling us not to believe such things. They are telling us to go ahead believing we are just as excellent as we have always believed we are. Good people, decent people whose society is under attack by a bumptious minority and whose essential goodness is not being fairly celebrated by the organs of information.

The fury with which the not-so-silent silent majority has responded suggests that they have been waiting a long time for the Administration's reassurance.

It may also suggest that they had been pushed too far into the doctrine of guilt until Messrs. Agnew and Nixon retrieved them. Psychologists believe that wallowing too long in feelings of guilt eventually leads to a reaction of hatred and an impulse to strike back at the object of guilt.

Vietnam, of course, has been a bad place for America's illusions. It has forced us to challenge our faith in antiseptic war by airplane, in our military indomitability, in the wisdom of our military commanders, in the judgment of Congress, even in the credibility of the President.

By turning colleges into instruments for draft-dodging, it has challenged our faith in education. It has challenged our belief in the honor of military service, and as we have systematically blown apart Vietnam and Vietnamese in the cause of securing "an honorable peace," we have been challenged to question our faith in American honor.

The Pinkville massacre strikes a blow against one of our fondest illusions, the American fighting man as G. I. Joe. How we loved that great guy—slogging through Europe with a wisecrack on his lips, a wink in his eye and a chocolate bar in his hand for the orphaned Paisano kids left behind by the Nazis. Now we are challenged to see him as a guy whose answer to a pleading mother hugging her child is a burst of automatic rifle fire.

We are probably not going to accept this assault on our illusions and self-respect. If the anti-war people believe Pinkville can be made an object of national shame which will persuade Mr. Nixon to grasp the thorn, they are probably mistaken.

Right now, we need terribly to believe in ourselves again; an effort to plunge us into deep guilt might very well backfire against the anti-war movement.

Deeds, Not Rhetoric

The President may also err, however, if he believes it will be enough in the long run merely to reassure us about our fundamental decency.

That may get us through an emergency, but in the long run we are likely to want, not only rhetoric, but also deeds that assert our national decency with such firmness that we no longer have to write letters to ourselves about our excellence.

Weakness at the Top

By PAUL JOHNSON
New Statesman

A senior diplomat remarked to me the other day that he could not remember a time when the world's leading governments had presented such a collective front of internal weakness.

The absence of authority is particularly striking in Washington. Nixon was elected by a hairsbreadth; does not control Congress or even his own party within it; has been obliged to pay an unusually large number of debts in his appointments; and already gives the impression of being remote and out of touch with the public mood.

The Judge Haynesworth business is the kind of thing which might happen to an unlucky lame-duck president but looks ominous in the first year of a new regime.

The President's budget program is already in an unholy mess, and he clearly has no new ideas about the law-and-order "problem," the issue which got him to the White House.

His device of using Spiro Agnew to voice sentiments he dare not articulate himself is superficially astute but in the long run is bound to cast doubt on the President's courage and self-assurance.

The Americans are beginning, I fear, to see the results of electing an identikit man. Nixon will only take decisions for which there is demonstrable majority support, so fearful is he of squandering his tiny capital of popularity.

He knows the nation wants to end the war; so he is for peace. But the nation is divided on the means; so he marks time with gestures, hoping a consensus will evolve, or alternatively that Hanoi will bail him out. I see no reason why either should happen.

A far more likely outcome is a political shift in Saigon, which will wholly snatch the control of events from Nixon's faltering hands.

The Americans in Vietnam are now in the same situation which faced the French in 1954—looking desperately for an imaginary half-way house between defeat and victory.

What of the other so-called great powers? The Soviet regime has lost its ideological self-respect and exists in a vacuum of ideas and policies. Any initiative at home or abroad would threaten its internal balance.

POMPIDOU

Anxious only to maintain the status quo, it nevertheless lacks Stalin's whole-hogging belief in the virtues of repression. The ramshackle Soviet empire is like an Austro-Hungary with H-bombs, run by a committee of Metternichs.

With political paralysis in Washington and Moscow, the military on both sides have an irresistible veto on disarmament. And I see no chance of anything emerging from the Helsinki talks, except, possibly, the decision to continue them in Vienna.

All the talks prove is that Britain and France are no longer welcome at the top table—as if we didn't know!

Both, in any event, are wholly immersed in domestic problems. Mr. Wilson hopes to carry out trips to Washington and Moscow; but his purpose is electoral.

President Pompidou has learnt the lesson that, for a medium-sized power, an ambitious foreign policy has to be paid for in domestic unrest.

Besides, he is not even his own master. His government is comparatively liberal, but his parliamentary majority is overwhelmingly hard-line Gaullist.

On the Common Market, on military policy, on the Middle East—even on such issues as capital punishment—he wants to change the Gaullist line; but he is hamstrung by the Chambre.

He cannot force a crisis without destroying the Gaullist Party, which in any event has been under a suspended death-sentence since de Gaulle left.

He is a clever and determined man, but he presides over a state in which the power-reflexes of the Fourth Republic are slowly but surely reasserting themselves.

SAUL BELLOW
. . . seeking wisdom

'Can't Allow Intellectuals To Be Naive'

By ISRAEL SHENKER

Elementary wisdom sometimes dictates unpleasant conclusions to the novelist Saul Bellow—that the species is mad, or that we are harried by the unworthy, or that we deserve no better fate. But he is in favor of seeking wisdom.

"Naivete," for intellectuals, should be a punishable offense," he said in a recent interview at his home in Chicago.

Bellow has just completed an exercise in the distinction between wisdom and knowledge, and this novel "Mr. Sammler's Planet" — will be published Jan. 30.

Mr. Sammler is an aged intellectual, a refugee from Nazism, and the book is an account of his wisdom and despair. The narrative melts back and forth between past and present horrors, and conveys the author's own distress. On the planetary level, Bellow sees dangers, and on the national stage, he is unhappy about the cast.

'Higher Ideals'

"American intellectuals don't enter government service very willingly," Bellow said, "and they look on government as a cold-blooded monster. They're separatist and radical by education, and feel they're serving higher ideals to resist, to stand outside.

"States are distrusted, establishments attacked, and there's plenty of reason to do both. Academics, poets, painters have always been considered females in this culture of virility, and occasionally have sought masculinity by sharing power.

"Intellectuals have gone by fits and starts—alienated by power or moving toward it gingerly. Certain intellectuals should aspire to public service, but there should always be a class of intellectuals who stand aside. I don't think writers or philosophers should associate themselves with state power, or allow the state to use them as ornaments."

Cherishes Freedom

Bellow teaches literature to graduate students at the University of Chicago, in a program called "Committee on Social Thought." Since he himself is interested in a great range of thinkers, his students hear about Melville one day, Baudelaire the next.

In between, Bellow discusses his manuscripts with colleagues, reads theirs, and wonders about the fate of man. He lives in an apartment near the university—no name or number on the door—and cherishes his independence.

Canadians Uncover Story of Man's Past

By DAVID TONGE

A unique picture of man in his transition from life as a nomad to life as a town-dweller has emerged in this season's excavations of what may be the oldest mud-brick buildings in the world. The buildings, in western Iran, date from about 7500 BC and objects found there have put the estimated date of the start of pottery-making back by 1,000 years.

●

One of the finest pieces found, a huge clay jar, had to be sawn open, since it was first discovered at the end of the 1965 digging season and could not be removed until work was resumed this year.

The name of the site, Ganj Dareh Tepe, means the Valley of Treasure and, if the pot had not been opened it is likely that local villagers would have smashed it to see if it contained any gold.

No gold or metal was found but the bones of men, animals and birds, the stone tools and figurines, are beginning to reveal part of the way of life in one of the world's earliest known villages.

Like so many archaeological sites it was found by chance. In 1965, a Canadian archaeologist, Dr. Philip Smith, of the anthropological department of the University of Montreal, was driving through the area with a colleague, Dr. Cuyler Young of Toronto, when a tire burst.

Dr. Smith noticed a mound nearby and returned to check if a few weeks later. He was struck by the absence of ceramics on the mound, and more so when the charcoal samples he collected there were carbon-dated to 600 BC for those at the top of the mound and to earlier than 800 BC for those at the bottom.

This is considerably older than the Neolithic site of Catalhoyuk in Turkey. The work carried out at Ganj Dareh has in fact revealed many surprising parallels to Catalhoyuk, in particular in the architecture. This is similar in most levels of the two sites, houses without stone foundation, built side by side, and probably entered from the roof.

Analysis of the other findings is at an early stage, and no wall paintings similar to those which make Catalhoyuk so informative have been unearthed. But many clay animal figurines have, as well as several little "mother goddesses" with exaggerated breasts.

There is thus perhaps some similarity in religion, though it is too early to say if this extends to burial rites. In Catalhoyuk the dead are buried under the houses, laid in a foetal position. At Ganj Dareh skeletons of only two adults, one child and one unborn baby have been found, not enough yet to draw any conclusions.

●

In this year's dig, the third on the site, Dr. Smith was helped by Judith Puller, an English archaeology student from the Institute of Archaeology, London, and four French-Canadian students from the University of Montreal.

Tools used on the site so hot that even the Iranian workmen called it "Hell Mound"—ranged from paint brushes and dentist's instruments to picks and shovels. Every bucket of earth was sieved and then shaken in water to float off vegetable material.

The high proportion of young animal bones suggests that goats were domesticated in the village, though sheep apparently were not. More important, the results obtained from the thousands of bird bones should indicate whether the site was inhabited all year round or was merely a staging post on the route from the summer to winter pastures.

●

Many of the birds are migratory and the birds still follow the same migration patterns, just as the nomads still pass the site nearly 10,000 years later.

One level of the mound was destroyed by a conflagration which accidently fired some crude unbaked pottery and thus preserved it. It would be fanciful to assume that ceramic firing was discovered in this way, just as the children's tale tells how the Chinese used to burn down villages as they thought that it was the only way of obtaining roast pork.

However, this pottery is the oldest so far known in the Middle East, well pre-dating that at Catalhoyuk.

The same blaze also fired the long, perfectly-made, slightly oval bricks from which the buildings were made. These bricks were joined together by cement-hard mud, and several animal hoof prints, probably goat or sheep, are clearly visible in some of them.

The walls of the structures are in some cases still standing to heights of five or six feet, which is extraordinary for an early Neolithic site. The building technique is a major advance on the older wattle and daub.

The whole village seems far too solidly built to have been only a temporary settlement, perhaps being used as a winter base from which some members of the tribe took their flocks in summer to higher pastures, the remainder staying, just as some groups do today in this region. Many of the brick-walled structures are small and seem to be storage places rather than living rooms.

Despite its five separate levels, the mound was only occupied for a thousand years or so. The few skeletons found indicate that it was not ravaged by disease. So why was it abandoned?

Maybe the workmen have found the secret — climatic changes having turned it from "Treasure Valley" to "Hell Mound." But this wild area obviously has more secrets to tell us of our past.

●

It surprised the world in the 1930s with the Luristan bronzes, and one cave at nearby Bissitum (also dug by Dr. Smith in 1965) shows traces of habitation over 40,000 years, from the period of Neanderthal Man up to historic times. But Ganj Dareh Tepe also contains many more secrets, and Dr. Smith plans to return there for at least one more season of digging.

They Made Alder Respectable, It Doesn't Hang Around Now

By ART STOTT

For as long as I can remember, a man could go to the beach closest to his home and find enough alder to supply his open fires during the whole Christmas season. That is until this year.

Stott

Like yonder peasant in Good King Wenceslas, he could take his crosscut or Swede bucksaw to the shore and gather winter few-yew-ell. It was one of the pleasant exercises of late October or early November, and the weeks intervening would provide drying time to assure good combustion.

I have been scouting two beaches for the last seven weeks and have found no usable alder bigger than a grown man's forearm. I am, I believe, the victim of my own loose talk and what some people call progress.

My paeans of praise to the burning qualities of alder, I surmise, have helped to educate others to its use and what may have drifted in on the tides since summer has been quickly cut and packed away by beachcombers who rise earlier than I do on my days off. If I'd shut up about it, there might be a few logs resting on the sand or gravel now. In my small way, I have contributed to the demand for this species and sharper operators have outfoxed me.

Beyond that, alder is coming into its own commercially. Where we once considered it basically a fuel, its use as corewood for furniture has been expanding. And now, thanks to progress and technology, it is increasingly harvested for pulp. It is no longer junk in forestry, and I'm told than no wood at all is considered weed growth now.

An alder, foresters explain, can reach maturity earlier than many trees. It can grow on poor land, though at a slower rate, and it usually begins to decay after about 50 years through centre rot. It, more selective, or backward, days loggers pretty well ignored it in their harvest of prime fir and other species, though they could make an honest dollar in slack time by bucking it into cordwood.

When wood and coal kitchen ranges and furnaces yielded to oil, gas and electricity for heating, alder managed to retain its popularity with the householder who considered his fireplace the focal point of his living room. Alder didn't spark. After it had seasoned a short time, it burned evenly and left nothing but a light white ash. Its nature gave it particular attractiveness in the burning—a soft, almost pink flame, threaded with blues and greens if it had been salt-water cured. You looked into the glowing coals and dreamed your dreams, unharried by explosions of other woods that sent burning embers rocketting into the room to char the rug.

So we of the alder cult fashioned our rituals. Selecting the stick you bucked into fireplace lengths became a refinement in the practised art of beachcombing. A neophyte learned first to identify the log. He was taught, at a latter stage in his progress through the priestcraft, how best to split it to expose inside fibres to the weather, how to stack it so the winds would have a curing effect and the pile would not degenerate into punk. We prided ourselves on our knowledge and our skills. And, apparently, we became too numerous for my liking.

It is still possible that alder rests unclaimed on outlying island beaches. I shall launch my boat and make a reconnaissance. If I'm lucky, I may tow a log or two home.

If not, I'll begin a new and sneaky campaign. It will start with a repudiation of the virtues I have extolled in alder. Who, I'll ask, would want such supine, unspectacular wood in his fireplace when he can use cedar or hemlock that crackles and pops cheerfully across the hearth. And if it's sustained, slow-burning fuel you wish, oak lasts longer. Have you tried arbutus, birch, willow? Who wants alder?

★ ★ ★

If that doesn't leave my favorite for me to find on the shore, then I'll move on the industrial front. There ought to be a pollution angle in the use of alder for furniture or pulp.

Should all else fail, well, I guess I could buy some alder. But what kind of beachcomber would that make me?

Fit to be tied.

250-Mile-Per-Hour Rail 'Bus'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 250-mile-an-hour rapid transit vehicle with a revolutionary magnetic power plant—designed so it eventually will ride a cushion of air instead of wheels—begins trial runs next month.

The 58-foot-long surface carrier, created for 80 passengers but now filled with electronic test gear, was unveiled Tuesday by the U.S. transportation department.

Spokesmen said full-scale operation of such vehicles would come sometime in the 1970s.

The prototype test vehicle, which resembles an airplane fuselage straddling a high, blade-like centre rail, was on display at a hangar at Los Angeles International Airport.

Next month it will be moved to a quarter-mile-long track in nearby Torrance for low-speed tests by the Garrett Corp., which built the vehicle for the federal transportation agency under a $3,200,000 contract. Date and place of later highspeed tests have not been determined.

The prototype has conventional railway wheels and runs on standard gauge track, down the middle of which has been installed a thin, 21-inch-high centre rail.

The wheels have no driving power. Forward motion is provided by a large electric motor inside the vehicle. The motor acts something like a magnet, pulling itself—and the vehicle — forward along the centre rail to which it is powerfully attracted but which it can never touch.

Engineers said the wheels eventually will be removed and the vehicle will be equipped to hover just above the ground, supported on downward-blasting columns of air as it slides frictionlessly forward along the guiding centre rail.

In the prototype, the motor gets current from a turbine generator but engineers said later models will draw power from lines overhead or alongside the track.

COSTS TOO HIGH, SAYS BOARD

Better Sewer Deal Urged

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark and Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell are considering possible steps which might be taken in the wake of public rejection of sewers in View Royal and Central Saanich last Saturday.

This was disclosed at the meeting Tuesday of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health by senior medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread.

He suggested the board write Loffmark outlining the facts—that both areas are polluted with sewage and this is a danger not only to the inhabitants of these areas but, because of a possible epidemic, to residents throughout the region and to tourists.

And he suggested the board write Campbell indicating that while the public sees the need for sewers, the public is finding difficulty in considering the financing of them.

TAXES GO UP

"I feel the referendums were turned down mainly because people felt it was too expensive, that taxes would go up too much," he said.

"There was not much difficulty in persuading them that sewers are needed."

Central Saanich Ald. Donald MacLaurin said if the province is really interested in preventing pollution, some standard charge should exist throughout the province with costs above this met from general revenue.

North Saanich Ald. Trevor Davis said everyone is thinking of installing sewers "at the worst possible time" because of high interest rates. Existing regulations should be enforced and faulty septic tanks corrected, he said.

Dr. Whitbread said the Health Act allows the minister to take action, the Municipal Act allows that minister to take action and the medical health officer can take action.

"Who is going to take action is under study—whether it will be done and by whom," he said.

Senior health inspector Laurel Benham said the public is "reaping the ill effects" of the post-war building boom where people were allowed to put houses on properties which would never normally allow septic tanks to drain properly.

From this developed the sand filter trap, which simply took domestic sewage to the nearest ditch.

A lot of systems were constructed in clay and to correct this and contain the effluent on the property would mean removing four or five feet of clay, installing permeable fill, erecting a pump to bring sewage up from the present level to the new layer.

Cost could run close to $1,000 and "after this we still may, in another dozen years, be faced with failures and having to provide sewerage at that time.

"And I'm talking of properties where you can do this. Many properties in View Royal are on rock and there is nothing you can do. The cheapest way for the taxpayers is sewerage—and now," he said.

Residents in both View Royal and Central Saanich were warned before Saturday that failure to approve sewerage could, or would, mean legal action and orders to install individual holding tanks plus trucking away of effluent, at a cost greater than sewerage.

BETTER FORMULA

The board agreed that, because present costs of sewerage are frequently greater than a householder can afford, the province be asked to develop a better cost-sharing formula between it and municipalities.

The board also agreed to send a letter of support to Esquimalt-Saanich MP David Anderson who has introduced a bill in the House of Commons to make all detergents bio-degradable.

Oak Bay to Cut Dangerous Tree

Oak Bay's trees came under fire Tuesday when the council's works committee met.

Public works superintendent Ralph Futcher said that chestnuts and planes on Hampshire and Monterey are breaking agricultural tile used for the streets' surface drain system.

Asked how much it would cost to replace the tile with more root-resistant material, municipal engineer Geoffrey White estimated the cost at $20,000.

He added that 80 per cent of the municipality's streets were laid with this tile.

The committee voted to take a poll to see whether frontagers would be willing to lose their trees and make a survey of how much an over-all replacement of tile would cost.

TREE DANGEROUS

One tree will definitely get the axe in January.

An oak tree at 577 Transit was declared dangerous and the committee voted $130 for its felling.

Committee members of the streets and traffic section will tour the area leading to Tolmie Park Sunday.

Residents have asked that an access be made to the park so that children can use the play area.

Police Chief John Green warned that cutting a path through bush could be dangerous:

ISOLATED AREA

"I want to go on record that it is in isolated areas like this that you find molesters and other types gathering. Parents should be warned."

The streets and traffic section asked the engineer to consult his Victoria counterpart on the traffic congestion problem at Cadboro Bay and Foul Bay.

Members felt that exits and entrances from the shopping complex on the city side needed study and some should be relocated.

Ald. G. Scott Wallace warned that the situation would be further aggravated when the proposed shopping complex on Foul Bay was built.

"It should be pointed out to the new council that this is going to be a real problem area."

4 Months For Hitting Ex-Wife

A 29-year-old man who struck his ex-wife and tore the phone receiver apart when she tried to get help was sentenced in court Tuesday to four months in prison.

Robert E. March, 1776 Island Highway, got three months for wilful damage and one for common assault.

March went to the home of his ex-wife and became annoyed when he found the babysitter looking after his three children had fallen asleep, court was told.

The police were called and the accused was told to go home.

After March's ex-wife arrived home and the accused had hit her and damaged the phone, police returned and arrested him.

Constance Seudamore, 18, of 731 Vancouver, was sentenced to one month in prison Tuesday, for theft under $50.

She removed the purse of an employee at David Ansen Fashions Ltd., 909 Government, Nov. 26 while she was visiting a friend also employed at the store.

The purse contained about $40.

Uvic Honors Retired Professor

A retired University of Victoria professor who began his teaching career in the 1920s has been named professor emeritus.

Professor George Brand, who retired this fall, was born in Scotland and came to Victoria as a boy before the First World War.

After completing high school here he taught at local schools and at Salt Spring Island, Port Alberni and Quesnel. He attended Victoria College and took a bachelor's degree in mathematics from UBC in 1930.

He later picked up a master of education degree from UBC.

During the Second World War Prof. Brand served in the RCAF as a navigational instructor.

He taught at the Provincial Normal School from 1947 to 1956 when it became the faculty of education of Victoria College.

He became a full professor of the faculty in 1961 and until retirement held a number of administrative positions, the most recent of which was director of student teaching.

The honorary title of professor emeritus is granted sparingly by the university to those who have made an exceptional contribution to academic life.

Prof. Brand, who lives at 4592 Bonnyview with his wife Winnett, said he plans to do some travelling during the coming year, to Banff in January and Europe next summer. He currently serves as clerk of sessions at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Officer Assaulted

John A. St. Cyr, 28, of 4183 Douglas, was fined $100 in court Tuesday for assaulting a police officer.

A Saanich police officer was checking the accused for a traffic infraction at the Town and Country parking lot, 3600 Douglas, Nov. 1 when he got out of the car and pushed the officer, court was told.

The officer warned St. Cyr but was pushed a second time.

Servants Worried

LONDON (Reuters) — The civil service union said Tuesday night it will press for a voice on a special government committee to examine Queen Elizabeth's finances to make sure 200 royal servants which it represents are not hurt by possible restrictions on the Queen's allowance. Prince Philip said last month rising costs may bring the Royal Family financial difficulties next year.

Economic Weapons Far More Effective Than Guns

By STANLEY KARNOW

HONG KONG (WP) — In Peking the other day, Premier Chou-En-lai unleashed a diatribe against the Japanese government that sounded excessive even by Chinese Communist rhetorical standards.

He accused Premier Eisaku Sato of militarism and attempting to revive Japan's wartime "Greater East Asia Co-Prosperity Sphere."

He also compared Sato to Tojo, asserting that the premier would meet an "even more ignominious end" than the architect of Japanese aggression in the Second World War.

●

While there was nothing substantively new in Chou's tirade, such denunciations of the Japanese are coming out of Peking with growing frequency, and they reflect a reality that is often overlooked by Americans seeking to understand the present evolution of Asia.

In contrast to the notions put forth by John Foster Dulles and Dean Rusk, who viewed the Far East as a major arena in a struggle between the United States and Communist China, it is now becoming increasingly clear that Peking's main rival in the region is Japan.

For the Japanese are, in fact, well on their way to shaping a "co-prosperity sphere" in the Pacific and Southeast Asia with economic weapons that are far more effective than the guns they employed a generation ago.

Moreover, the Japanese economic offensive throughout the area is having a broader and deeper appeal to Asians than Peking's tedious exhortations for revolution.

Japanese aid to the countries of the Far East totalled 559 million dollars last year, and is expected to double by 1974. The value of Japanese exports to Asia this year will probably exceed five billion dollars, a jump of more than 30 per cent over 1968.

As a consequence, the Japanese presence in this part of the world is visible to an extent that only the wildest dreamer would have prophesied as recently as a decade ago.

●

Looking like an Oriental version of Babbit, with his golf clubs and Rotary Club insignia, the Japanese salesman is a familiar sight from Taipei to Djakarta, and so are his products—Toyota cars, Hitachi machinery, Nippon telephones and, of course, the ubiquitous Honda motorcycle.

Japanese investments are pouring into Bangkok factories, Hong Kong department stores and Indonesian hotels. Even Hanoi is reportedly negotiating with Tokyo firms to build industrial plants in North Vietnam, while the Kremlin is seeking Japanese capital for Siberian development schemes.

The Japanese are constructing roads in the Philippines and a dam in Laos and Japanese vacationers, their Canon cameras clicking and their Sony transistors blaring, are fast replacing blue-haired American widows as the staple item on the Oriental tourist circuit.

Oddly enough, this dynamic expansion is going on despite a widespread lack of affection for the Japanese, particularly among Asians who can recall the war. But, as a Manila businessman put it, "I can forget the past when it comes to making money."

●

In many ways, too, the receptivity to the pragmatic Japanese mirrors a pervasive weariness among Asians with ideological claptrap, whether it enanates from Peking or Moscow or Washington.

A hopeful prospect for the future, therefore, is for Japan to continue its economic escalation in the Far East as the United States gradually disengages from the area. Over the long run, this could have two salutary effects.

By pushing programs untainted by the ulterior political and military motives that characterized so much of U.S. involvement in Asia, the Japanese can contribute to both the stability and neutralization of a region that should never have been dragged into the cold war.

In the years ahead, as the aged militants in Peking die, the Japanese may also serve to bring Red China into the international community. Significantly, Japan is still Peking's number one trading partner despite the invective directed by the Communists against the Sato government.

●

But whether they can fulfill this dual role depends primarily upon how the Japanese conceive of their eventual responsibilities in Asia.

In an article written before he took office, President Nixon recommended that a rearmed Japan become the pivot of an Asian defence arrangement. Other strategists believe that the Japaneye must amass a nuclear arsenal in order to maintain parity with China.

The Japanese have rejected such suggestions, contending that militarization beyond the enlargement of their self-defence forces would, among other things, undermine their goodwill abroad as well as provoke domestic dissension.

Their aim, then, is to remain under the U.S. security umbrella while doing business with everyone—and they may ultimately demonstrate the wisdom of this policy. So far at least, nobody has been able to prove them wrong.

Hue Slowly Recovers

HUE (AP) — The mood is peaceful but tense in this ancient imperial capital of South Vietnam nearly two years after its ordeal in one of the war's most savage battles.

The Tet offensive of February, 1968, left the city 75 per cent destroyed in a 25-day battle. Much of the old grandeur is smashed and overgrown with moss.

But in the newer part of the city, shoppers crowd the rebuilt stores and a shiny new market.

With aid from Saigon, the local economy is recovering slowly. The Long Tho lime factory six miles west of Hue has reopened, employing more than 200. Refugees are being resettled. Offshore fishing restrictions have been eased. More people are working in the rice fields and timber forests. Sawmills are starting up. Still, tax revenues are lagging and working capital and loans are scarce.

Most people, one municipal government official said, have snapped out of the stupor that followed the devastating offensive.

The Tet offensive was the crucible in which its new character, attitudes and programs were forged.

SLAUGHTER A FACTOR

A major reason for the change of attitude is that the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong slaughtered about 3,000 residents while they occupied the city. Bodies are still being dug up from mass graves.

The once militant Buddhist and student factions have adopted a passive stance, officials say. Many of the people who were passive before Tet are now openly pro-government.

An example of this is the Peoples' Self-Defence Force, now 57,000 strong in Thua Thien province with 30,000 persons taking part in Hue alone, helping to protect their city from new depredations. Hue's population totals 160,000.

"Everyone in Hue has had relatives killed by the Viet Cong," explained Ngo Dong, a biology professor at the rebuilt Hue University and the provincial chief of the self-defence force.

"After Tet, the people were fearful and depressed. As things went along they gained confidence. Where before they were afraid to receive weapons, they now ask for them."

Authorities say the force of men, women and youngsters from 16 to 65 is helping keep the populous areas secure and is encouraging villagers and hamlet dwellers to identify the Viet Cong among them.

But the province chief, Col. Than, believes that 1970 will be a crucial year. The Viet Cong, he says, has had nearly two years to rebuild its forces after losing about 5,000 killed in the battle for Hue, and may be preparing for a new strike.

Teenagers Dead; In Parked Car

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Police have found the bodies of two teen-agers in a parked car in a park here.

They were identified as Charles Lloyd Gibbs, 19, of North Vancouver, and Karen Adele Bielech, 16, of Vancouver.

Police believe the pair died of carbon-monoxide poisoning.

Nightmare of My Lai Incident Dogs Medina

By PETER BRAESTRUP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Shortly before Thanksgiving, at his three-bedroom apartment in Ft. Benning's Custer Terrace, Capt. Ernest L. Medina called his three young children into the small living room for a serious talk.

As they sat on the sofa with his wife Barbara, the 33-year-old Silver Star winner explained that they were going to hear "very bad things on TV and the newspaper stories would say bad things about daddy's company while we were in Vietnam."

As Medina recalled Saturday, he told the children, "I did not know if stories were true, that people were investigating to see if daddy's company and your father had done anything wrong. Everything in the end, I said, would probably bring the truth out."

The children listened quietly.

Then Ingrid, 10, said: "Yes, Daddy, I understand, and I will pray for you and Mommy at night for God to help you."

Cecil, 9, reacted like a good army brat: "Yes Sir," he said.

Gregory, 6, had other concerns. "I'm hungry," he said. "When do we eat?"

For Medina, Gregory's response provided one of the few humorous notes in what has become a long, nightmarish aftermath to the alleged massacre of unarmed Vietnamese by members of his unit (Company C, 1st Battalion, 20th Infantry, 11th Brigade) at My Lai 4 Hamlet in Quangngai province on March 16, 1968.

No Orders

"I did not receive or issue orders to kill unarmed civilians," he said in an interview last weekend. "I did not see a massacre. And I was not told about a massacre."

The nightmare was intensified for Medina—and for his German-born wife—just after Thanksgiving, when the press carried an accusation of murder by Richard Pendleton, 22, of Richmond Calif., a former member of Company C.

On Nov. 37, Pendleton, now an unemployed laborer, said that Medina had shot a small boy at My Lai 4.

Paul Meadlo, another Company C veteran, appeared on CBS television Nov. 24 to declare that Medina was "right there" but did nothing to stop the killing.

As conflicting accounts by a dozen other Company C enlisted men broke into print, Medina was variously accused or absolved of deliberately inciting his men to kill civilians in a briefing the day before the attack on My Lai 4.

Although, Medina said, he was shocked and angered by the accusations, he had to remain silent until last week—by army orders.

Murder Charge

After an eight-month investigation of the My Lai affair, the army had made no charges against Medina, who was first interrogated by the army inspector general's office last May 13. But on Nov. 24, 1st Lt. William L. Calley Jr. one of Medina's (and Meadlo's) former platoon leaders, was officially charged at Ft. Benning with the murder of 109 unarmed Vietnamese at My Lai.

At Ft. Hood, Tex., Staff Sgt. David Mitchell, one of Calley's squad leaders, is under formal investigation under Article 32 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice on allegations of assault with intent to murder at My Lai.

As their company commander, Medina was—and is — a potential witness in the pending Calley court-martial. He remains a key figure in the army's separate investigation, ordered Nov. 24, of the initial, 11th Brigade dismissal 20 months ago of Viet Cong allegations that a massacre occurred at My Lai. Lt. Gen. William G. Peers is in charge.

Shot Woman

Medina was allowed to discuss his part in the My Lai operation last Thursday during a break in his five-hour testimony before the Peers panel—his first visit to the Pentagon in 16 years of army service. Medina told a news conference that he had instinctively turned and fired at a prone Vietnamese woman, whom he had been led to suspect was an armed Viet Cong, when she suddenly moved. But he denied that he had shot anyone else, that he had ordered the killing of civilians, or that he knew that his troops were committing mass murder.

Fresh from battalion staff work and two years' duty as an infantry instructor at Fort Benning, Ga., Medina took over Company C at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii on Dec. 19, 1966—almost a year before the company, as part of the newly-formed 11th Brigade, went to Vietnam.

"The only way the company could go was up," he recalled. "We became the best company in the battalion. We took every award—athletics, the company-of-the-month trophy."

During this Hawaiian interlude, Medina picked up the nickname "Mad Dog"—later given an ominous significance—during mountain manouvres when his company managed to round up most of an "agressor" force. The aggressor leader, a Maj. Hoak, kept breaking into the battalion radio net to decry, in mock Communist fashion, "Mad Dog Medina."

"I'd walk into the officers' club after that, and people would say 'hey, Mad Dog,' how are you? It just became a joke."

In subsequent interviews with The Post, Medina gave a detailed rebuttal to his accusers. He also provided the fullest and most coherent account of Company C's frustrating experiences before and after My Lai 4, as well as his own recollections of the interest shown during and after the March 16 action by higher-ups in reports of civilian losses.

"Nobody in combat sees everything that's going on," Medina noted.

Medina's Story

"Everybody sees only a small part of it," Like most other eyewitnesses, Medina finds it difficult 21 months later, to provide a precise timetable of events at My Lai or, verbatim, exchanges of radio messages between himself and higher headquarters. But he is certain, for example, of what he did not say or do—notably killing a small boy or reporting "body count" of 310 enemy dead, as alleged by some accounts.

Medina's own story is best told in chronological sequence:

Company C was chosen as the advance party for the 11th Brigade's movement to Vietnam in December, 1967 — a tribute to its combat-readiness.

The company had Christmas dinner at a landing zone known as Gilligan's Island, near the 11th Brigade base at Ducpho. Medina and his prized first sergeant, Harry F. Hobscheid, an 18-year army veteran, had scrounged up tables and a proper mess hall.

On the menu board hung a jocular sign: "Welcome to Mad Dog Medina's mountain restaurant."

Task Force Set

After making one combat assault (by helicopter) west of Ducpho, and engaging in search and destroy operations, Medina and his company moved 40 miles north to Landing Zone Dottie on Jan. 26, 1968. LX Dottie was in the so-called Muscatine Area of operations embracing Quangngai province's much-battered Binhson and Sontinh districts east of Coastal Highway One.

To cover this 150 square mile area—newly evacuated by South Korean marines—the 11th Brigade had created a small scratch organization headed by Lt. Col. Frank A. Barker Jr., brigade executive officer. It was called Task Force Barker and composed mainly of one rifle company plucked from each of the 11th Brigade's three battalions: Medina's company; Company B, Fourth Battalion, Third Infantry; and Company A Third Battalion, First Infantry.

Landing Zone Dottie, the task force headquarters, and Landing Zone Uptight, were the artillery bases from which Company C and the other units operated. "We were informed that the Viet Cong had been in the area for 20 or 25 years," Medina recalled. "The inhabitants in the outlying villages had all been moved at one time or another. The area was a permanent free-fire zone" (In which civilians had been warned they might come under fire).

If American troops received any fire from a hamlet, they could return it, Medina said; but all troops were instructed routinely to be very careful about firing at unarmed, unthreatening civilians.

MEDINA . . . tells his story

Company C, engaged in patrols well north of My Lai 4 at the time, ran into its first booby trap on Jan. 29. It was a home-made explosive which slightly wounded one man. Medina recalls that it "right away confirmed in everybody's mind that this was a dangerous area."

Booby Trap

On Jan. 31, as the massive Communist Tet Offensive broke against Quang Ngai and other cities, Company C got orders to move down to a blocking position on Hill 102, overlooking the Pinkville area including My Lai 4 and the northern approaches to Quang Ngai city. At one point, a South Vietnamese outpost mistakenly opened up on Medina's men with machine-gun fire. A booby trap wounded a man.

But from the blocking position, Medina spotted 200 to 300 Viet Cong, with women and children carrying dead and equipment, moving north and east toward Pinkville out of Quang Ngai city, which the Viet Cong had assaulted the night before.

Medina radioed for artillery fire on the area—which was in the South Vietnamese 2nd Division zone. To get clearance took several hours; by that time, the target had vanished.

Preached Caution

Initially, Medina recalls, Company C was fairly lucky in its forays around the notorious Pinkville area. But mines and booby traps, often "placed by women and children," were everywhere. Medina preached caution: Never go through an existing breach in a hedgerow, stay off the ricepaddy dikes and walk in the muck, don't ever take the same patrol route twice in a row.

On Feb. 5, 1968, Medina's men went into the Pinkville area proper for the first time—establishing a blocking position on a stream north of Pinkville while other Task Force Barker units tangled with the local 48th Viet Cong Battalion in the Song My village cluster including numbered My Lai hamlets. "It was a tough fight," Medina recalled. He lost one man killed, and there was intense small arms and rocket fire.

The company's worst single day was Feb. 25, when well north of Pinkville near Lacson in Bingson district, it ran into a well-laid minefield. Six men died and 12 others were wounded, most of them in the first (Calley's) and third platoons. For his part in saving the wounded, including his own radio man, Robert Vanleer, Medina was later awarded a Silver Star, the army's third highest medal for valor. "I lost some of my best men that day," Medina said.

Girl Killed

In another incident, Medina recalled, three men were killed or wounded when a command-detonated mine went off. The Americans found a 15-year-old girl hidden nearby with her hand still on the plunger. They killed her.

On March 15, with his understrength company's morale "not at its highest," Medina flew from Landing Zone Dottie aboard a helicopter with Col. Barker for a distant look at My Lai 4 and the rest of the Pinkville area. They did not overfly the hamlet—to avoid giving away the intended operation.

Barker's orders to Medina to assault the hamlet were apparently based, as it turned out, on faulty intelligence. But Medina recalls, "I had no reason to doubt what they told me."

The word from Barker and his staff was that the 48th Viet Cong Battalion, with a strength of perhaps 250 to 280 men, was in My Lai 4. The intelligence reports also predicted that the hamlet's women and children would be gone by 7 a.m.—headed for market at Sontinh district or Quang Ngai city.

Task Force Barker's mission was to destroy the long-lived 48th Battalion, if possible, and to destroy, as well, its base of operation in the hamlets of Pinkville.

Medina's company was to conduct the main assault on My Lai, while Company B was to land a mile or so east of My Lai 4 and Company A was to set up a blocking position to the north. Medina also got orders to burn houses and blow up bunkers and tunnels, as well as destroy the livestock.

"Normally this is not done," said Medina, referring to the livestock. "I did not think it unusual. The idea was to destroy the village so the 48th VC would be forced to move."

Expected Fight

On March 15, it looked like a tough fight. "I expected to go in and take casualties and to inflict casualties," Medina recalled.

The men in Company C were apprehensive, Medina felt. "I myself had a queasy feeling in my stomach and I was sure that other people had the same feeling."

So Medina called the men together at LZ Dottie for a pep talk and a briefing. "My objective was to fire them up to get them ready to go in there," he said. The prospect of close combat with the 48th VC Battalion, observed from afar in the past, "was really uppermost in everybody's mind."

He relayed to the men what Barker had told him. "I did not give any instructions as to what to do with women and children in the village," Medina recalled, largely because of the intelligence prediction that none would be present when Company C attacked.

What promised to be a savage battle against a well-entrenched Viet Cong battalion turned out to be a walk in the sun.

At 7:20 a.m. on March 16, 1968, with his command group (three radiomen, interpreter, an artillery liaison officer, chief medic) Medina boarded a UH-1-E "Slick" (troop-carrying helicopters) in the first eight-helicopter lift from LZ Dottie. The First Platoon (Calley) climbed aboard the other helicopters. To create a diversionary feint and avoid the artillery's gun target line, the first flight circled to the south before heading to My Lai 4.

"I could see the smoke and flash of the artillery landing on My Lai," Medina recalled. Six helicopter gunships were also at work with rockets and machineguns. As Medina's craft came in to the landing zone in a ricefield 150 meters west of My Lai's houses, the door gunners opened up with suppressive fire.

No ground fire, as far as Medina could tell, greeted his initial trooplift. He raced to a small graveyard on the edge of the ricefield, closer to My Lai, and radioed the tactical operations centre (TOC) at LZ Dottie that the landing zone was "cold."

Return Fire

"Immediately thereafter, a helicopter broke in and said 'negative, negative, we are getting ground fire and we see VC with weapons. The LZ is hot,'" Medina recalled.

Medina passed on the word by radio to his platoon leaders (the first lift was down). "I told them to move with extreme caution, and to return any fire."

After marking the landing zone with smoke bombs (to show incoming helicopters wind direction), Medina and his command group moved to the east side of the landing zone, still outside My Lai's cluster of perhaps 30 to 40 huts. The houses were irregularly spaced and separated by trees and foliage.

From this command post on My Lai's western edge, Medina sent two platoons

Officer Recalls My Lai Incident

abreast slowly through My Lai 4, with Calley's First Platoon on the south and Lt. Stephen Brooks' No 2 Platoon on the north. (Brooks was later killed.) Medina held his third platoon just west of the landing zone, using it for reserve and security, later sending some of it to seek out reported Viet Cong weapons.

From his command post, Medina had radio contact with platoons and his superiors at LZ Uptight. As usually happens in Vietnam combat, he could not see his two slowly advancing platoons. However, the platoons were reporting no enemy contact. Nor, at that point, did Medina see any civilians.

Meanwhile, the helicopters (from Chulai and Ducpho) were reporting sightings of dead Viet Cong with weapons outside My Lai in the rice fields. They marked them with smoke bombs. Medina, in response to urgings "to recover those weapons" from Maj. Charles Calhoun at LZ Dottie, diverted Brooks' Second Platoon to search a small cluster of houses north of My Lai. Thus, for a while, Calley's platoon was alone in My Lai.

Found Bodies

Another location of Viet Cong with weapons was reported by helicopters almost due 500 meters south of My Lai 4. Medina, with no one else to send, conscious of Calhoun's urgings, decided to check out the helicopter report himself. A helicopter was hovering over the area, which was marked by smoke.

Command group with him, Medina slowly walked toward the smoke watching for enemy. Shortly after he started, he found the torn bodies of a man, a woman, and a small child, apparently killed by artillery fire or rockets. As he approached the smoke, with the OH-13 helicopter overhead, he saw a young woman in black pajamas lying on the ground, apparently dead. Then, out of the corner of his eye, he saw her move.

"As I turned, I thought to myself 'You're dead, you fool'," Medina recalled. He quickly fired his M-16 rifle and the woman lay still. He saw no weapons and checked no further. "I didn't feel very good about it, and I left," Medina said with a shake of his head.

Moving back to his command post on the edge of the landing zone, Medina was notified by radio that one man had been shot in the foot. He was told it was an accident. When he got to the landing zone about 9:45 a.m., he radioed for a "dustoff" (Medical evacuation helicopter) for the wounded man.

Houses Burning

Right after the dustoff, Medina got word from task force headquarters that women and children, unexpectedly, had been spotted by helicopters in the hamlet. As ordered, Medina passed the word via radio to his platoons, urging them to use caution. He had no word of any civilian casualties being caused by his men. Then he started moving through some huts on the southern edge of My Lai.

"Here I saw some bodies at a distance," Medina recalled. "I did not go over and check them out." There were, Medina later reported, perhaps 20-28 bodies some 150 meters south of My Lai.

From there, Medina and his command group moved north and east through My Lai 4, where houses were burning and bunkers had been blown up. He saw some freshly constructed bunkers which, had they been occupied, would have caught his men in a crossfire. "You couldn't see more than 30 meters in there, (the village)" Medina said.

On old man and a girl were picked up, but not harmed, Medina said. The girl, he recalled, was turned over to Michael Bernhardt, now a sergeant. But he saw no evidence of a massacre and no more civilian dead along his route.

One Casualty

Medina did not join up with Calley's and Brooks' outfits until he came out into the rice paddies east of burning My Lai 4. Brooks' platoon had rounded up about 85 civilians in the field, holding those of military age, and informing the others to move southwest to Sontinh district. The company then moved east, having suffered only one casualty — the man with the wounded foot.

During the early afternoon, Medina's unit "married up" with Company B, 4th Battalion, 3rd Infantry, which had moved inland from the coast, and set up a joint night defensive position.

At this point, Medina was asked on Radio by Task Force Barker's headquarters to take his company to My Lai 4 and check for civilian casualties. Medina referring to what he had seen, said he saw only "20 to 28" civilian dead. At this point, Sabre Six, code-name for Major Gen. Samuel Koster, commander of the American Division, broke in on the radio, apparently from a helicopter in the area.

He passed the word that Medina should not take his company back "into all that mess," this late in the day. Medina was not unhappy. To go back to My Lai meant a round trip of perhaps 2,500 yards, with the possibility of casualties from snipers, booby traps, and mines. Instead, he set up a defence perimeter with Company B, worrying about the possibility of ground probes and mortar fire from the elusive 48th VC Battalion.

The night passed without incident. Next day, Medina was ordered by Task Force Barker to establish an outpost on Hill 85, west of Mykhe 3. He sent Calley and his platoon; Calley and one other man — Paul Meadlo — were wounded by mines. Medina pulled back Calley, who did not require hospitalization, and his men and evacuated Meadlo by helicopter.

Then, per orders, Medina struck south through three deserted hamlets, burning them all — Mykhe 3, 1, and 2. At Mykhe 4, four suspects were captured, among them a man who looked important.

This man, Medina recalled, "didn't look like a rice farmer. He looked like a man, who dressed in a business suit, would look at home in the office."

Told by his Vietnamese interpreter that, properly scared, the suspect would talk, Medina emptied all the bullets out of his .38 revolver and pretended to play Russian Roulette with the prisoner. "He called my bluff," Medina recalled. "He didn't talk."

Prisoner Talked

Next, Medina put the man up against a tree and, aiming carefully, fired an M-16 round into the tree four inches over the man's head. After a second round over the man's head, Medina told the interpreter to tell the prisoner Medina intended to shoot him. Medina put on the M-16's safety and aimed right at the man. The prisoner suddenly began to speak.

"If he hadn't talked, I never could have shot him," Medina said. "It is not the normal way of treating prisoners, but I felt that he could give us valuable information."

Some useful news given by the prisoner, who apparently was the Viet Cong province chief for Quang Ngai, was that the Viet Cong habitually used My Lai 4 as a transfer point for their wounded who were destined for jungle hospitals in Quang Ngai's western mountains.

After a night at Mykhe 1, the company retraced its route, in part, through its first night position, and got word to await transport back to Landing Zone Dottie.

En route to the pickup zone near My Lai 3, Task Force Headquarters radioed Medina that Colonel O. K. Henderson, the new brigade commander, was en route to visit. Henderson arrived by helicopter with his intelligence officer and a lieutenant-colonel from the 611th Artillery.

Accusation

"Colonel Henderson told me I had been accused by a chopper pilot of shooting a woman at My Lai 4," Medina recalled, adding that the colonel said it was just an informal investigation. "He asked if there had been any war crimes at My Lai 4, and I told him no." Medina told the colonel about shootng the woman. Henderson replied (as he later told newsmen): "Well, that is understandable." Then Henderson left.

The lift-out took most of the afternoon. Medina was the last to leave. From Colonel Barker, he discovered on his return to Landing Zone Dottie that Colonel Henderson, the brigade commander, had questioned the men in his company about reports from helicopter pilots of promiscuous shooting at My Lai. At Barker's request, Medina in turn questioned his platoon leaders including Calley and platoon sergeants and got only negative replies. Then, discussing the matter with Col. Barker, Medina recalled, "I suggested that somebody else better do any investigating."

Barker, Medina recalled, replied: "Ernie, you're doing a good job. Go back and run your company."

"As far I was concerned," Medina felt, "the matter was over."

A few days later, as the company was starting into hazardous squad-size patrols around LZ Dottie, "Barker said I should inform my people not to discuss the thing with themselves or anyone else."

Skirmishes Fade Aloof Majesty

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — Noel Coward, once dismissed as a brittle "playboy of the West End world" by critics of the 1920s, has emerged as the grand old man of the British theatre on the verge of his 70th birthday.

As Britain moves into a solid month of Coward revivals and tributes, a new biography of the Master, as everyone in theatreland calls him, tells how the young playwright, struggling to get The Vortex produced in 1924, nearly signed his talent away to the Canadian millionaire industrialist Sir James Dunn in return for a regular salary.

Dunn met Coward at the fashionable French resort of Deauville where, true to his subsequent image, the flamboyant young author was keeping up glossy appearances on scanty funds. Impressed by Coward's work, Dunn offered to pay him £100 a month for five years in return for 20 per cent of his earnings over that period.

A woman friend of Coward's persuaded him not to sign himself away to "a strange financier." Soon after that, The Vortex burst upon London and Coward's meteoric success began.

BBC PAYS TRIBUTE

Now, after a post-war period when his reputation slumped, Coward is enjoying a full-scale renaissance. The BBC is preparing a month-long cavalcade of his plays, movies and songs in a £100,000 tribute such as few living authors have received. The National Film Theatre is featuring a Coward season plus a personal appearance by The Master, who now lives most of the year in Switzerland.

On the birthday itself, Dec. 16, a host of Coward's eminent friends and admirers, including Earl Mountbatten and Sir Laurence Olivier, will broadcast tributes to him from London's Savoy Hotel.

It's even whispered that the knighthood which has twice eluded him may figure in the New Year's Honors.

Coward himself refers to the adulation as "Holy Week" and regards it all with the amused detachment of a man who has experienced bouquets and boos—sometimes in quick succession—over a career stretching 60 years from his beginnings as a boy actor in white knickerbockers.

He has seen the wheel come full circle from the days when The Vortex, story of an uneasy mother-son relationship complicated by the son's drug-taking, was howled down by old-guard critics of the 1920s as "filth" and "a dustbin of a play."

He has learned to cope with extremes of praise and blame with the same flashing wit that pours out of his best plays, or simply by shutting his ears to the commotion and getting down to a new project, whether it was a Viennese-style musical comedy, a serious wartime drama, a collection of short stories or a cabaret act written and sung by himself.

On the few occasions when Coward produced a leaden-footed flop, it was quickly submerged in a dazzling cascade of talents exercised in another direction. He worked at fantastic speed in his heyday, throwing off a couple of evergreen songs before breakfast and the best part of a new play by lunchtime.

Private Lives, the sparkling high comedy he wrote for himself and the late Gertrude Lawrence, was written in four days: Hay Fever in three.

Coping with hostile critics outside the theatre required a different approach. Coward once found a neat way to score off Canada's Lord Beaverbrook after the press baron's newspapers slighted the playwright's war work for British intelligence.

HURT BY ATTACKS

As Sheridan Morley's new biography tells it, Coward was deeply hurt by the attacks in the Daily and Sunday Express. He had taken on several intelligence assignments, including one offered by Canadian Sir William Stephenson, then running British counter-espionage in the United States, but his role had for one reason or another petered out.

When Coward came to make his celebrated naval war movie, In Which We Serve, he had a destroyer steaming out of harbor just after Neville Chamberlain's announcement of war over the radio. Swirling in the dirty water by the ship's side was the notorious front page The Daily Express published during 1939 with the banner headline: No War This Year.

Beaverbrook, by then in the war cabinet, was furious and tried hard to get the movie banned. It went on to become the Royal Navy's most successful piece of wartime propaganda.

QUICK TO RETORT

The new Coward biography, A Talent To Amuse—which takes its title from a line in one of the songs from Bitter-Sweet—is stuffed with Cowardisms that never made the plays.

Once, when the playwright was boarding a train, an insistent woman reporter kept asking him if he had anything to say to The Star.

"Yes," replied Coward as the train pulled out. "Twinkle."

He described Lionel Bart's musical Blitz! as "twice as long as the real thing and just as loud."

While trying to organize a midsummer benefit involving a large number of London actors, a committee member suggested to Coward the show should be titled Summer Stars. Replied Coward: "Some are not."

He once summarized his advice to actors as: "Speak clearly, don't bump into people and if you must have motivation, think of your pay packet on Friday."

Policeman Charged

DRESDEN, Ont. (CP) — Constable Duke McCutcheon of the Dresden police force was charged Tuesday with attempted murder in connection with the shooting of his wife and another man while they were in the policeman's private car.

Jeannine McCutcheon, 25, and the mother of two, is unconscious in a Chatham hospital with a bullet wound in the head and Arthur Rich, 25, of Dresden is in critical condition with two bullet wounds in the abdomen. Hospital officials said their conditions were slightly improved Tuesday night.

Chief Alvin Watson of the Dresden police department said Mrs. McCutcheon may never speak again.

Const. McCutcheon, 25, who has been on the police force nearly six months, was arrested a short time after the shooting.

Inspector A. W. Goard of the provincial police criminal investigation branch, Toronto, is investigating the shooting.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Job placement agencies will be asked soon by the British Columbia Union of Students to co-ordinate their plans to help unemployed youngsters next summer, BCUS treasurer Tony Hodge said Tuesday.

EMERGENCY NUMBERS DISTRIBUTED

Lack of a handy emergency phone number may be fatal during the holiday season, B.C. Telephone Company officials warned today.

During the season phone circuits become jammed with holiday calls and it sometimes is difficult to reach the operator quickly.

To avoid delay, the company is distributing emergency number cards to all customers. They emphasize that these should be kept near telephones for quick reference.

Loblaw

Loblaw Companies Ltd. had net income for the 28 weeks ending Oct. 11 of $5 million up from $1.47 million for the corresponding period of the previous year.

Sales reached $1.33 billion during the period, up from a comparable figure of $1.26 billion the previous year.

Presiden G. C. Metcalfe reported that Loblaw now owns voting control of Sayvette department store and expects this acquisition "will make a valuable contribution to the growth of the Loblaw organization in the years ahead."

Cascade

Jim Pattison Enterprises Ltd. has purchased a 5 per cent interest in Cascade Fasteners Ltd., of Richmond.

"We are presently establishing warehouse distribution locations across the country," Cascade president Jerry Cam Janes said.

Cascade Fasteners is the only company in western Canada manufacturing fastener products.

Northern Gas

Northern and Central Gas Corp. reports net income for the nine months to Sept. 30 of $7.4 million or 46 cents a share, compared with $8.8 million or 59 cents a share in the corresponding period of the previous year.

Sales and other income were up to $107.5 million from $97.4 million a year earlier but the company said earnings were hit by strikes in Northern Ontario, rate reductions in Manitoba and increased taxes and wages.

Equal Partners

Eaton's of Canada Ltd. and the Toronto Dominion Bank have exercised options which will make them equal partners with Cemp Investments Ltd. in the second phase of $100 million Pacific Centre in Downtown Vancouver.

The three companies already are partners in the first phase of the two-block project known as Block 52 at the southwest corner of Georgia and Granville.

Construction on this first phase is under way and includes a new Eaton's department store and a 30-storey Toronto Dominion Bank tower. Completion is scheduled for late summer of 1971.

The second phase, Block 42, is at the northwest corner of Georgia and Granville, and will include the city's largest enclosed shopping mall with space for 85 to 100 stores.

Standard Oil

Standard Oil Co. of Ohio shareholders voted by wide margin Tuesday in favor of a merger with BP Oil Corp. on terms which could give British Petroleum Ltd. eventual control of Sohio.

Votes for the merger totalled 11,240,316 in favor to 114,671 against, equal to 83.6 per cent approval. A 66-per-cent minimum vote was required.

Shareholders also voted to increase Sohio stock by about 20 million shares to 40 million.

Dofasco

Dominion Foundries and Steel Ltd. has bought adjoining land at Hamilton from Canadian Industries Ltd. and Chipman Chemicals Ltd. (a wholly owned CIL subsidiary) to allow plant expansion.

Transfer of the property will take place over a maximum five-year period, the first stage involving about 39 unused acres to take place immediately. The balance will be turned over as CIL phases out its chemical manufacturing at that location.

CIL will obtain from Dofasco 190 acres near Hamilton, use of which has not been decided.

Commonwealth Fails in Bid To Raise Funds; Windup Due

VANCOUVER (CP) — Shareholders of Commonwealth Trust Co. have been called to a special general meeting Dec. 20 at which they will be asked to pass a resolution to wind up the company.

The company has been in business for seven years and was founded by A. G. Duncan Crux, Vancouver lawyer who is at present in Nassau, Bahamas, appealing an extradition order to answer fraud charges laid by the British Columbia government.

The notice of winding up comes as anti-climax to a year of endeavors by the directors and shareholders to save the company from bankruptcy and preserve it as an operating B.C. trust company.

Commonwealth Trust was the centrepiece of a group of some 35 companies generally referred to as the Commonwealth Group, all of whose records were seized by RCMP on Nov. 6, 1968. Many of these are still in either receivership or bankruptcy.

The receivership order for Commonwealth Trust, however, was lifted last July 16 by court order and the directors since that time have endeavored to obtain an investment of new capital to restore the company as a viable operation. The B.C. legislature earlier in the year voted to make an interest-free loan provided new capital could be raised.

The government's offer was to lend up to $3,000,000 provided it was matched, dollar for dollar, by new equity capital A minimum of $1,000,000 equity was required before any part of the loan would be made.

The notice to shareholders, issued by Sydney W. Welsh, chairman of the board, and received in Monday's mail, said the efforts to raise capital have been unsuccessful.

Mr. Welsh, in a covering letter sent out with the meeting notices, emphasized two points:

—Depositors are secured by the Canadian Deposit Insurance Corp., a crown agency, for all their deposits up to 20,000 in each case. In addition, he said, it was expected that, when all assets are liquidated, there will be money to pay off deposits in excess of $20,000.

—There probably will be no money left for shareholders when the winding up is complete. "Because of the complexities I regret that I can hold out little hope of any eventual recovery for shareholders," Mr. Welsh said.

Second Bank Chief Raps Tax Proposals

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government's white paper on tax reform is in "direct opposition to all the recent fiscal and monetary measures designed to discourage sharply-rising prices," Neil J. McKinnon, chairman of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, said Tuesday.

He told the bank's annual meeting that if the white paper proposals are adopted, the savers of the nation will be converted to spenders; interest rates will rise even higher; Canadian exports will suffer; the balance of payments will be adversely affected; and the living standard of Canadians will be lowered.

His opinions followed those of G. Arnold Hart, chairman and chief executive officer of the Bank of Montreal, who told his bank's meeting Monday that the proposed reforms would add to inflation by encouraging consumption at the expense of saving.

Mr. McKinnon said the proposal for a capital gains tax on equities to be paid every five years, added to recent changes in estate and gift tax laws, will "negate the efforts" of middle income people to save and accumulate capital.

"The authors of the white paper seem to have overlooked that new investment capital is extremely sensitive to the environment provided by the host country. No one needs to invest in Canada."

Until now, Mr. McKinnon said, Canada has been attractive to foreign investment because her tax system has created incentives and provided consistent treatment for both external and domestic capital.

But the attitude of foreign capital to investment in this country would undergo "profound change" if the tax measures are implemented.

President L. G. Greenwood told shareholders that curbing inflation will continue to be Canada's most urgent economic problem next year.

Japan to Ease Trade Barriers

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the Canada-Japan trade council said Tuesday trade between the two nations has exceeded the billion-dollar mark this year.

Col. Robert Houston of Ottawa told a Vancouver Board of Trade luncheon the Japanese bought roughly $650,000,000 worth of Canadian goods during 1969, primarily raw materials such as coal, mineral concentrates and potash.

Canada, on the other hand, has imported $400,000,000 worth of Japanese products, mainly manufactured goods such as cars and electronic equipment.

Col. Houston predicted that by 1973 Canada will be exporting $1,000,000,000 worth of its products to Japan. This will include about $100,000,000 worth of copper concentrates from British Columbia, he said.

EASE CARRIERS

In releasing the council's projected 1969 trade figures for the first time, the trade council president said the Japanese government is also showing signs that it will liberalize its trade barriers against foreign investment and manufactured imports.

This means that the Japanese market will be open to many Canadian manufacturers and investors for the first time. "It will be a highly competitive market, but I'm sure Canadians can succeed there if they put their minds to it."

Canadian industrialists "can look forward to the possibilities of becoming more involved in the Japanese economy through direct Canadian investment, joint projects and in setting up our own subsidiary operations in Japan."

Col. Houston said even though Japanese investment in Canada is growing by leaps and bounds, it "can hardly be thought of as making very much impact on control of Canada's natural resource industries."

U.S. DOMINATES

U.S. interests, he said, control 52 per cent of Canada's mining and smelting industry and 62 per cent of the petroleum industry. All other nations combined, including Japan, control no more than seven per cent of mining and 12 per cent of petroleum.

"I believe we should welcome Japanese investment growth because it will help us to some extent offset the predominance of U.S. and European control over our industries," said Col. Houston.

"The only Canadian industry in which the Japanese predominate is the coal industry because of their tremendous demand for coking coal for the vast steel industry."

He said the council estimates that Japanese investment in Canada to date totals about $110,000,000. Of this amount, about 25 per cent came through purchases of equity and the rest entered Canada in the form of loans of various kinds.

Most of the funds have gone into development of primary resources in BC. and the prairies, and a car assembly plant in Nova Scotia, he said.

New Pulp Plant Set for Quesnel

VANCOUVER (CP) — Weldwood of Canada Ltd. and Daishowa - Marubeni International Ltd. announced Monday they have signed a contract to form a 50-50 partnership to build and operate a $75,000,000 bleached kraft pulp mill at Quesnel in central British Columbia.

The announcement was made by Weldwood president Roger Montgomery and Daishowa-Marubeni president R. Saito.

Mr. Montgomery said the agreement is subject to the approval of the boards of directors of the companies involved.

Construction is expected to get under way in 1970, he said, and the pulp company will operate as a partnership under the name of Cariboo Pulp and Paper Company.

Daishowa - Marubeni International is a newly-formed subsidiary of Daishowa Paper Co. Ltd., one of Japan's largest paper manufacturers, and Marubeni-Iida Co. Ltd., one of the country's major trading firms.

The announcement did not estimate the time when the mill will be ready for production but Weldwood has a commitment with the B.C. government that it must commit $30,000,000 by June 30, 1971, as a condition of its pulp harvesting agreement.

Weldwood now operates a large logging, lumber and plywood operation, centred at Quesnel.

CRUEL PARADOX

ROME (AP) — Much of the world faces poverty, hunger and starvation, while at the same moment, in what could be described as perhaps the cruellest paradox of modern times, some nations suffer the burden of mountainous surpluses of wheat and dairy products.

The Food and Agricultural Organization of the United Nations, based in Rome, says in its summary of 1969 that both the United States and Canada have huge wheat surpluses, and the biggest agricultural problem confronting Western Europe is a large dairy food surplus.

•

By contrast, India produces 100 million tons of grain each year, and needs every bit of it. If weather conditions cause a drop as small as 10 per cent in India's grain production, FAO notes, India needs an emergency supplement of some 10 million tons.

Here's how worldwide surpluses stack up, according to FAO's summary:

The United States had a 1969 wheat surplus of 22.1 million metric tons. Canada added 22.6 million tons to the mountain of grain; Australia holds 7.5 million tons; the European Common Market countries have a surplus of 10 million tons; Argentina holds nearly 750,000 tons and the Soviet Union and Hungary have an unspecified total which FAO estimates at 62.2 metric tons.

•

India, Pakistan, the Philippines and Mexico are nearing self-sufficiency in grain production, with surpluses in sight in 30 years, FAO reports.

None of the governments involved nor FAO has found a promising solution to the problem of too much food.

If food is given away to the countries that need it, world trade would be affected adversely, FAO notes. Storage also presents problems. FAO estimates storage alone may cost 10 per cent of the total value of grain per year. Butter costs even more to store because of spoilage.

One solution no one considers any more is that of the 1930s—when piglets were plowed under the soil in the U.S. and coffee was used to fuel locomotives in Brazil.

U.K. TAX MEN HIKE CHASTITY KEY PRICES

BILSTON, England (UPI)—The price of chastity belt keys in England is going up.

Colin Stone, 20, who manufactured 20,000 of the keys to dangle as a decoration from feminine waists, plans to begin selling them Saturday for 66 cents each.

But British customs and excise officials declared the keys a luxury and slapped a 25-cent purchase tax on each.

"It could turn the keys into a flop," said Stone.

Marriage Ceremony Alternative

TORONTO (CP) — Couples who are not regular churchgoers but do not want a civil marriage ceremony may have an alternative if a United Church minister has his way.

The service proposed by Rev. Fred Styles of Newtonbrook United Church lacks the religious aspects of a church service but has some of its beauty in the form of two love poems by Kahil Gibran, a Lebanese mystic and writer who died in 1931.

Mr. Styles said he created the service because he found some of the people he counsels "have very little real interest in the church or in the things for which it stands."

"Some are honest enough to say that they don't share the beliefs of the church and have no intention of having anything further to do with it once the wedding is over.

"The alternative is a civil ceremony—a city hall special—and many people find this an unsatisfactory alternative to the traditional wedding. There, a civil servant who cares nothing for the individual at all as people, but regards them as one more application to be processed, hurries through a two-minute formula, without looking up from his paper, stamps the form and collects the $10 fee.

"My secular marriage service is designed to bridge the gap, to provide an esthetically satisfying ceremony for those persons who have no religious convictions or whose convictions about religion are negative ones."

He denies that his service will weaken the church.

"The position of the church is not compromised but strengthened in this way. People who want a church wedding now will clearly be saying that they want their marriage based upon the principles for which the church stands, while people who do not want to be involved with those principles have an acceptable alternative."

Deaths Investigated

EDMONTON (CP) — RCMP are investigating the deaths of two children of the Sturgeon Lake Indian Reserve, 250 miles northwest of here. Brenda Moses, eight months, and Janet Papastesis, 18 months, were found dead Sunday in unheated buildings on the reserve.

TERENCE WHISTLED . . . DAY AND NIGHT

BLACKBURN, England (UPI) — Terence McGrory's problem was that every time he breathed he whistled. With good reason. He swallowed a toy whistle a year ago and it lodged in his lung.

Seven-year-old Terence's mother, Mrs. Christina McGrory, was told he would "probably cough up the whistle, and he was given no treatment. He felt no pain."

The pain came later—to the ears, when Terence whistled day and night.

Mrs. McGrory had all she could take. The whistle was removed in a 30-minute operation.

Swedish Shuttlers Edge Canuck Stars

Sweden's badminton brothers, Kurt and Sture Johnson, were forced to dig deeply into reserves of stamina and skill at the Racquet Club of Victoria Tuesday night before swatting out a sweep in three exhibition matches against Canadian shuttle stars Bruce Rollick and Wayne Macdonnell.

In singles marathons that lasted one hour and 10 minutes each, Kurt edged Rollick 16-10, 17-18, 15-9 while Sture slipped by Macdonnell 15-8, 9-15, 15-12 before approximately 600 spectators.

The visitors then won a doubles tussle against Rollick and Macdonnell 15-12, 11-15, 18-15.

Because of the time required to complete the men's matches, a scheduled exhibition clash between two former Canadian women's champions—Judy Rollick and Alison Ridgeway—was cancelled.

Bill WALKER

The Johnsons were in town last night. If you missed them, you missed two of the best in the world of badminton.

Or let's put it this way:

"I think Rudy Hartono can be beaten."

The speaker was Sture Johnson, one of the Johnson brothers who took part in the exhibition badminton matches at the Racquet Club of Victoria.

Sture is the young one. Kurt is the elder. Both are consulting engineers in Sweden. They have their own business. Thus their time is their own. And their time is nearly all badminton.

Who, pray, is Rudy Hartono?

He is currently No. 1 in the world, and he comes from Indonesia.

And the Johnsons noticeably stirred at the mere mention of his name. This is because they both have lost to Hartono. Sture was the latest. He dropped the Canadian championship this year to the Indonesia star in the final.

There is a feeling that the amazing Hartono, now about 21 years of age, can be beaten, but only if he will enter more tournaments so that other players can analyze his style. In the last few years he has been virtually supreme.

"He has his own particular style," said Kurt, "and it's tough to get to know it when you only play him once in a while."

It could be a form of disrespect by the Johnsons, but rather if implied a fierce pride in their own capabilities, because Hartono is practically a national idol in Indonesia, and does practically nothing but play badminton, "at the government expense," said Kurt.

"Even then he isn't the best," Kurt added, as he mentioned another Indonesia star. "But he's not allowed to win."

How do you figure to beat Hartono?

Sture's eyes lit up.

"We have come close, got 11 points against him, and in a few more matches, maybe we will know him better." he commented of the unorthodox play of the champion.

Both agreed that former world champion Erland Kops, now about 33, had been a more representative champion.

"He played all around the world and met all comers," Kurt remarked.

And how do the brothers Johnson fare in top flight badminton?

A leading question, but Sture generally is regarded as being in the top six in the world.

And Kurt agrees, even though he beat his younger brother in this year's Swedish championships.

"But then he won the four years before that," he added. "And I won before that."

Is the trend changing?

"I don't think so," said Kurt. "He'll probably beat me the next two," in an honest appraisal of his younger brother's ability.

In their cross-country tour, how would they rate Canadians?

The opinion was divided.

Sture gave a slight edge to Jamie Paulson, current Canadian champion. Kurt was more inclined to go along with Wayne Macdonnell as being the steadier of the two.

In a European tournament, the top Canadians would rank anywhere from five to 16, was the consensus, depending, of course, on the competition.

There was no general disagreement on the difference between European and Canadian play.

Both visitors appeared to suggest that perhaps in Canada the "smash" was being overplayed.

"That's all they seem to do," said Sture, "smash, and smash again."

WAYNE MACDONNELL
. . . Kurt's choice

They had beaten Macdonnell and Bruce Rollick in a previous exhibition at Vancouver Monday night, and were praiseworthy of their opponents except for that one particular style mentioned earlier. They again swept two singles and a doubles match against the Canadian stars Tuesday night at the Racquet Club but had to work hard all the way.

Speed, conditioning, quickness of foot and lightning reflexes, are they the prime attributes?

"Oh yes, we train hard in the off-season to get our legs in shape," said Sture. "But once the season is underway, we just play."

The difficulties of a tour such as this are many, but the prime one is playing in buildings which are not conducive to good badminton, Kurt suggested of one loss he had suffered.

"We played in an arena; it was cold and clammy, and the floor was slippery. And you just can't take a chance under those conditions of pulling a leg muscle."

"Oh, we lose a few," he laughed at the inquisitive glance.

But judging from their record, it doesn't happen too often, or when it counts.

Kurt holds a victory over Kops in the 1969 All-England and has represented Sweden 12 times in International competition.

Sture, besides 12 international appearances, has victories over Paulson in the 1968 and 1969 Canadians and the 1968 All-England, as well as wins over Kops and Tan Aik Huang, who is rated not worse than No. 2 in Europe.

But the fellow they would both like to get is that Indonesian.

It was the name "Hartono" that struck the most responsive chord in both and perhaps proved that they may not be as charitable as they first appeared, particularly the next time they get a crack at the champion.

It is a knock against their ability and they don't intend to let it go unquestioned.

CONTINUE SCHEDULE SQUAWKS

NO CHANGES PLANNED

Russians Ease Tone, But Avoid Tune

WINNIPEG (CP) —The Russians have toned down their demands for changes in the 1970 world hockey tournament schedule but they still aren't playing the tune the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association wants to hear.

The latest contact from the Russians, a telegram requesting the CAHA to "consider" changes they have requested, was received Tuesday night.

Gordon Juckes of Winnipeg, executive director of the CAHA, said a telegram was sent back to the Soviet Union saying that the other five competing countries have officially accepted the schedule and urging the Russians to do the same.

"I can't see any reason why, if five others accept the schedule, the sixth wouldn't, particularly when they have the championship to protect," Juckes said late Tuesday night.

The deadline for countries entering the tournament in Montreal and Winnipeg was Monday but the Russians advised they would come only if schedule changes were made.

Replying to that demand, the CAHA sent a telegram to the Russians telling them no changes would be made and no conditional acceptance would be considered.

The tournament is slated for Montreal March 12-20 and Winnipeg March 22-29.

The Russians first objected the the scheduling at the International Ice Hockey Federation's directorate meeting in Montreal last month. They left the meeting threatening to boycott the championship.

But if they do fail to enter a team, IIHF rules provide for a penalty: The Russians would be dropped for a year into the B pool and the United States, top-ranking B pool team, would be moved up to the A series.

Juckes said he still is confident the Russians will attend.

"They all have to play 10 games in 16 days and the Russians are no worse off than the majority, and certainly no worse off than Canada has been in other schedules," he said.

PORTRAIT OF A WINNER

He didn't exactly look like winner as he applied ice-bag to black eye in dressing room, but Donato Paduano had just captured Canadian welterweight boxing crown Tuesday night by earning majority decision in rugged battle with Joey Durelle before 12,147 fans in Montreal.

Paduano Is New Hero Of Montreal's Italians

MONTREAL (CP)—Canada has a new welterweight boxing champion and Montreal's sizeable Italian community has raised him to hero status.

He is Donato Paduano, 21, who won the title Tuesday night with a majority decision over Joey Durelle, 33, from Sorel, Que. Durelle has held the title since 1963.

Two judges — Montrealers Tommy Dalton and Tony Baillargeon—each gave the 12-rounder to Paduano by narrow margins. Baillargeon voted 58-54 in his favor, while Dalton had it 57-54 on his card.

The third judge, Tony Beaudry, called it a 56-56 draw.

Paduano weighed 146¾ pounds to 146¼ for Durelle.

Announcement of Paduano's victory was the signal for a good portion of the 12,147 screaming fans at Montreal Forum to descend to ringside. They had paid close to $100,000 at the gate, with Paduano guaranteed 15 per cent of the take and Durelle a $10,000 guarantee or 15 per cent.

It was close to 20 minutes before the new champion could get clear of his followers and return to his dressing room.

EYE ALMOST CLOSED

Sporting an almost closed right eye, the young veteran of 90 amateur and only 16 pro fights, finally held court. His win was the 16th consecutive since entering pro ranks.

"Durelle gave me the toughest fight of all," Paduano said. "I was nervous at first, but after the fourth or fifth I knew I could win."

Paduano was off to his usual slow start as he allowed Durelle to take the aggressor's role in the early going. The new champion appeared content to fight in flurries using his rapid hands and young legs to keep him out of trouble.

He finished strongly with Durelle hanging on at the final bell.

Paduano now has contracts signed for two bouts—three days apart.

He was forced to withdraw from a New York bout against former world champion Carlos Ortiz scheduled for Madison Square Garden in November. Paduano had a bad right hand and couldn't make the fight.

AGREED TO JAN. 26

The Garden's matchmaker agreed to a postponement on the condition the bout be held Jan. 26.

In order to get the crack at Durelle's title, Paduano had to agree to a return bout here Jan. 29. Now manager Roger Larivee must attempt to have the New York date cancelled to fulfill the Montreal engagement.

NHL PLANNING NEW LOOK AT DOME SITE

BUFFALO (AP)—The NHL expansion committee will reconsider a stipulation that the new Buffalo entry must play in Memorial Auditorium instead of a proposed domed stadium.

Clarence Campbell, league president, said Tuesday that another look will be taken at the design for hockey seating in the $50,000,000 stadium to be built in suburban Lancaster.

Original stipulations were that the club play in the Auditorium, owned by the city of Buffalo, and that seating be expanded from 9,800 to 15,000. Expansion cost was estimated at $4,500,000.

Mickey Waiting For Big Chance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Larry Mickey is still awaiting his chance to prove he can play as a regular in the National Hockey League.

The 26-year-old native of Lacombe, Alta., now a member of Montreal Voyageurs of the American League, has been unable to stick with any club since breaking into the NHL with Chicago Black Hawks in the 1964-65 season.

That season he played one game—one period to be more exact—when Chicago used him against Toronto Maple Leafs. He had been called up from St. Louis of the Central Professional League to replace Eric Nesterenko. After the game he was sent back to the minors.

He was drafted in 1965 by New York Rangers and for the next three seasons he was up and down shuffling between New York in the NHL and Minnesota, Omaha and Buffalo in the CPHL and AHL.

Last season he ended with Toronto where he spent much of his time on the bench. Montreal Canadiens drafted him last June and promptly dispatched him to their new AHL Voyageurs, who also operate in the Forum.

PLAYED LAST WEEKEND

Mickey saw action last weekend with the Canadiens, shorthanded because of injuries to Claude Provost and Henri Richard and the absence from the lineup of John Ferguson and Jacques Laperriere, both under suspension.

Both Provost and Richard are expected to play tonight when the Canadiens meet the Leafs in one of five scheduled games, but Mickey doubts he will be in the Montreal lineup.

"I don't know if I'll be playing with Canadiens against the Leafs or not," Mickey said Tuesday. "The reason they called me up wasn't only because of the injuries, I think, but because they aren't happy with the way things are going."

He was apparently referring to criticism by Canadiens' coach Claude Ruel for lack of checking by the Montreal forwards in recent games.

SOUTH SHIELDS . . . . . OUSTS OLDHAM

Non-Leaguers Advance

LONDON (Reuters) — South Shields became the fourth non-league club to reach the third round of the English Football Association Cup when they beat struggling Fourth-Division Oldham Athletic 2-1 in their second-round soccer replay Tuesday night.

The three other non-leaguers — Sutton United, Hillingdon and Brentwood—qualified last Saturday.

South Shields next meet Queen's Park Rangers, the promotion-chasing Second Division club.

In another replay Tuesday night, Fourth-Division Scunthorpe United whipped Third-Division Stockport County 4-0 to earn a home game against Second-Division Millwall.

Third Division Walsall and Brighton drew for the second time and must now meet again for the right to visit First-Division Crystal Palace.

Houle Gives Canada Good Shot at Title

TORONTO (CP)—A. J. (Buck) Houle of Toronto, general manager of Canada's national hockey team, said Tuesday his team might receive player help from National Hockey League teams other than Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens.

Houle, just returned from a 15-day tour of Czechoslovakia and Russia, said in an interview Canada has a strong chance to win the 1970 world hockey tournament, scheduled for March in Montreal and Winnipeg.

He also had some comments in reply to J. F. (Bunny) Ahearne of London, England, president of the International Ice Hockey Federation.

WILL OBSERVE RULES

Ahearne, on a recent visit to Canada, said "it would be silly" for Canada to attempt to pad its roster with professionals.

"First of all," Houle said, "Mr. Ahearne sets his own rules whenever he pleases. But Mr. (Charles) Hay, president of Hockey Canada, has already stated that we would abide by the rules recorded at Crans, Switzerland, this summer."

ALLOW NINE PROs

"The rules state that we can't use more than nine professionals. Players are either professionals or amateurs. There's nothing about reinstated professionals.

"We don't tell the Russians who they can play. If they say their players are amateurs, we have to go along with it."

Houle was pleased with the play of his team during last week's tour. Russia won the tournament with four victories and a 2-2 tie with Canada, the second-place finisher with three victories a tie and a loss.

He thinks "two or three good shooters and a right-handed shooting defenceman" could be added to strengthen the team for the tournament next March.

WEALTH OF TALENT

"We possibly might get help from somewhere else, like Boston or New York," Houle said. "They have a wealth of talent." NHL officials from Montreal and Toronto have already promised players from their minor league organizations for the 1970 tournament. Defenceman Barry McKenzie, now a professional and a former National, joined the Canadian team for the tour compliments of Minnesota North Stars.

Commenting on the Czech-Russian tour, Houle praised the play of Billy Harris, a former star forward in the NHL with Toronto, Detroit Red Wings, Oakland Seals and Pittsburgh Penguins.

PRAISES HEINDL TOO

"Billy Heindl was another who played extremely well," Houle said. "Corby Adams isn't that good a skater, but he always comes to play." Adams, from Barrie Flyers, won the Ontario Hockey Association Senior scoring title last season with 79 points.

Houle said any further player additions to his team should have a chance to adjust to the international style when the Russians and Czechs tour Canada later this month.

"It's a little different game than the pros are accustomed to," he said. "It isn't fair to tell a pro to go out and beat the Russians without any previous experience.

"In Canada, we teach a player to do the right thing at the right time. Overseas, they decide on a set plan and follow that pattern."

Houle said one of the additions might be Bill (Red) Hay, the former star centre of the NHL's Chicago Black Hawks and son of the Hockey Canada president.

Tiger Returns British Award

NEW YORK (AP) — Dick Tiger of Biafra, former world middleweight and light-heavyweight boxing champion, has returned his medal as Member of the Order of the British Empire to the British ambassador in Washington.

Tiger said he returned the medal in protest "of the arms and ammunition the British government is sending to federal Nigeria and its combined moral support of this genocide against the people of Biafra."

Clair Carved Great Record As Rider Pilot

OTTAWA (CP)—After 14 years as head coach of Ottawa Rough Riders and five with Toronto Argonauts, Frank Clair began a new football career Tuesday when he signed a four-year contract as the Ottawa general manager.

If it's half as successful as his coaching was, Riders have a bargain.

Clair won two Grey Cups with Argos and three with Ottawa. In 14 years as head coach here, he never missed an Eastern Conference playoff.

"But the new job is a great challenge," Clair told a news conference.

Rider owner David Loeb also announced the hiring of Jack Gotta, Clair's assistant for the last two years, as the new Ottawa head coach. He signed a three-year contract.

The shuffle was made necessary when general manager Red O'Quinn of the Riders quit to take the same job with Montreal Alouettes.

WASTES NO TIME

Clair said he intends to go to work right away at his new post, talking to Ottawa players who have indicated they won't be back with the Grey Cup champions next season.

"I haven't been in a position to do that until now," Clair said.

He indicated he had little hope of enticing end Margene Adkins back. Adkins has played out his option and says he wants to play for a United States team.

Vic Washington, an outstanding offensive halfback, still has his option year to play out but he says he wants to go to U.S. ball next year.

"I'll be talking to Vic," said Clair. "Really, he has nowhere to go."

BIG PROBLEM

Clair said he was "very interested in keeping (Gene) Gaines here." Gaines, a defensive halfback, played out his option this year. So, too, did halfback Ron Stewart.

But the big problem for Riders is finding a replacement for quarterback Russ Jackson.

Gotta, 38, an outstanding end for Saskatchewan Roughriders before entering coaching ranks, said he is looking "for an athlete" who can take the punishment Canadian quarterbacks are subjected to.

IT'S A GOOD START

"Joe Kapp really did us a favor when he said all quarterbacks should play in Canadian ball first," Gotta said.

Kapp, after several years with B.C. Lions and Calgary Stampeders, now is having a brillant season with Minnesota Vikings of the National League.

There were reports that Riders are interested in obtaining James Street of the University of Texas. But neither Clair nor Gotta named any names at the news conference.

Clair said he will join Gotta in scouting for players in a rebuilding year for Ottawa.

Baseball Orphans Getting Together

PORTLAND (AP) — William Cutler, general manager of the Portland Beavers, said Tuesday the Pacific Coast League baseball club is only a few days away from signing a working agreement with the Seattle Pilots.

Portland is the only triple "A" club without a parent team, while Seattle is the only major league club without a triple "A" farm team.

Cambridge Defeated

LONDON (CP) — Oxford beat Cambridge, 9-6, in the annual university Rugby Union match here Tuesday.

Canucks Grab Lead By Clipping Eagles

VANCOUVER (CP)—Led by Ted Taylor's two goals, Vancouver Canucks dumped Salt Lake City Golden Eagles 6-4 and moved into first place in the Western Hockey League before 6,686 fans in the league's only game Tuesday night.

Pat Hannigan, Marc Reaume, Duke Harris and Andy Bathgate added a goal apiece to give Canucks the victory and move them one point ahead of the idle Portland Buckaroos.

Ernie Hicke, Bruce Carmichael, Rick Pagnutei and Guyle Fielder replied for Salt Lake, who remain in last place, six points back of Denver Spurs.

Vancouver led 3-2 at the end of the first period, 5-3 at the end of the second and traded goals with the Salt Lake club in the final period.

Taylor earned his two goals —picking up his first while his club was shorthanded and then firing a 20-footer past Merv Gunner, the Salt Lake netminder in the final period.

Vancouver fired 45 shots on Salt Lake goaltenders Rus Gillow and Merv Gunner, who replaced Gillow in the final period.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the Salt Lake City club said that rookie right winger Galen Head, injured in a game Nov. 20, will be out of the lineup indefinitely.

Head, who scored 67 goals and 54 assists last season for Johnstown of the Eastern Hockey League, was checked into the boards by Don Ward of Seattle, suffering a fractured cheek bone and eye injuries.

DON'T IGNORE CZECHS!

Harris Feels Russians Lax Around Goal

Times News Services

Billy Harris has a few observations to declare about Russian hockey players and Jackie McLeod tenders his respects in the direction of Czechoslovakia.

They offered their opinions Tuesday shortly after Canada's national team returned from Moscow, where the Nats finished second to Russia in a six-team international tournament.

McLeod, coach of the Canadian team, says Czechs can't be overlooked in the world championships in March despite its indifferent record in the Moscow meet.

"The Czechs have more depth this year than any team of theirs that I've ever seen," said McLeod. "They're going to be tough."

The Czechs had a 3-2 record in the tournament which ended Monday, including a 4-0 victory over Canada. Canada, with a 2-2 tie against the Soviet Union, finished second to the Russians.

McLeod was enthused over the Canadians. performance. While the Nationals still need some help before March, he said he doesn't expect too many changes.

"We played well. The first game, the one we lost, came right after we arrived in Moscow. We were dead tired. After that, we got better."

First-String Netminders Sat Out

McLeod said the Russians used first-stringers against Canada except for goalies Victor Konovalenko and Victor Zinger. But he said he expects to see Konovalenko back on the job for the championships.

Harris, a centre with several years of National League experience, agrees with McLeod that the Canadians were below form against the Czechs. "It was unfortunate that we had to play Czechoslovakia first," Harris said. "If we had played them later during the tournament, we would have beaten them. Our team improved from game to game and, in fact, we could have won against Russia. They iced their strongest team but even so we out-checked and out-hit them."

Harris, who scored three goals in the five games, said he detected a few weaknesses and "many surprising strengths" in Russian players.

In acquiring his first taste of international competition, the former pro believes at least four or five NHL teams would have trouble winning in Moscow on a prolonged road trip.

Harris was particularly surprised with the fervor of Soviet and Czechoslovakian body-checking since the world amateur rules were amended last summer to permit unlimited hitting. Previously, body-checking was allowed only by a team in its defensive zone.

"Physically, some of the games were played as tough as any NHL games I played in," said Harris, who played 769 NHL games with Toronto Maple Leafs, Detroit Red Wings, Oakland Seals and Pittsburgh Penguins before retiring from professional rank.

Russian Attackers Easy to Direct

He was surprised at the lack of Russian power around the opposition's goal, however.

"I thought they would play it tough in front of the net, but they didn't," he added. "Our defence was conspicuous the way they cleared the area in front of our net."

Harris also noticed a weakness in the Russian goaltending.

"I think they've got problems in the goal," he said. "They replaced Konovalenko with two younger goalies, but neither was very impressive. They alternated two goalies in the games against us and Czechoslovakia."

On one hand, Harris feels that some NHL teams would have trouble wining in Russia but says he doesn't think the Russians "would win many games in NHL rinks if they came over on a long trip."

The Canadian team that competed in Russia had one other former professional, Brian Conacher. At least seven others are expected to be added to the roster for the world tournament at Winnipeg and Montreal next March.

But Harris also feels the Russians and Czechs are both getting stronger.

Then, speaking of Canada's chances in the world tournament, Harris said:

"My feeling is that we've got an excellent chance to win. We've got dedicated players. There are many factors, of course, in such a tournament. But everything being equal, we have as good a chance to win as has Russia or Czechoslovakia."

Cox Hoping For Return To U.S. Tour

VANCOUVER (CP)—Bob Cox, Canada's leading money winner on his own country's tournament trail, said here that he still has hopes of getting back on the U.S. golf tour where the real gold is.

Today, his career on the U.S. Professional Golfers Association tour is a question mark because he failed to win $925 in two tournaments needed to retain his playing card for 1970.

He managed only $185 in tournaments in Hollywood, Fla., and Hilton Head, S.C., but said in an interview: "I've got a job . . . my golf game."

EXCEPTIONAL YEAR

In the U.S., Cox earned only $1,075 in official money and another $3,500 in unofficial PGA events but he had an exceptional year in Canada winning $19,000, winning four tournaments, including the Canadian PGA championship and the Canadian Tour championship.

He needed $2,000 to keep his U.S. card.

"What's next?" he asked. "I'm going to apply to the USPGA for an extension of my card.

"Maybe I can convince them I deserve a three-month extension. I'll explain that I had to miss all that time on the tour, March to September, because I couldn't afford it."

CLAY APPEARS HEADED . . .

. . . FOR BOUT WITH FRAZIER

Cassius Finds Welcome Mat in Florida

MIAMI (AP) — A Cassius Clay-Joe Frazier heavyweight title fight, bringing the undefeated former champion back to the ring, appeared Tuesday to be headed for the 48,000-seat Tampa Stadium.

Clay's New York attorney, Bob Arum said, "I'm flying to Florida to work out the details."

Meanwhile, a Miami promoter who thought he had the bout locked up, promised a "blockbuster announcement, no matter what they are claiming."

Arum said Murry Woroner, who is licensed to put on fights only in the city of South Miami, is no longer involved in the negotiations.

"Frazier's attorney wired Woroner's lawyers Tuesday and said terms proposed by him were not acceptable and that talks were ceased," Arum said.

Woroner said his attorney-received no such wire and said Clay's legal counsel refused to answer or return his telephone calls.

Gov. Claude Kirk jumped into the ring and said: "I would like to see it accomplished for the state of Florida. He (Clay) lost his title legally, not by fisticuffs."

Tampa promoter Ron Gorton, working on behalf of American Leisure Corp., said he had contacted authorities regarding renting Tampa Stadium and said negotiations for closed-circuit television were well under way.

Gorton said the Frazier-Clay fight will be under the auspices of Tampa Boxing Enterprises, a wholly-owned subsidiary of American Leisure Corp.

CASSIUS CLAY

Lions Acquire Quarterback

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference Tuesday announced the signing of Billy Guy Anderson, 27, a quarterback with NFL and AFL experience.

Anderson, six foot, three inches and 210 pounds, was drafted by Los Angeles Rams after setting seven college records in 1965 with Tulsa University.

He was on the Rams taxi squad in 1966, saw service in eight games with Houston Oilers of the AFL in 1967 and returned to the Los Angeles taxi squad in 1968.

Anderson was traded with defensive back Jim Raye and a third round draft choice to Philadelphia for defence back Al Haymond in August this year and subsequently released.

ARTIFICIAL BREEDING BED WORKING

The Duncan dam near Nelson sits squarely astride the breeding grounds for two million Kokanee salmon.

Government biologist Ira Withler delivered a film lecture to the Victoria Kiwanis Club Tuesday illustrating how the little land-locked salmon has been saved—by the longest artificial spawning channel in the world.

The channel is two miles long, a serpentine stream 30 feet wide with controlled flow and a nine-inch bed of gravel specially sized and screened.

LAND-LOCKED

Kokanee are a land-locked clan of Pacific Sockeye salmon and a critical part of the food supply for the giant Rainbow trout in Kootenay Lake, explained Withler.

Mature fish are about a foot long and turn a brilliant red during their spawning run.

When the Duncan dam, started in 1965 and completed two years later, wiped out the spawning ground, biologists decided to build the artificial river using nearby Meadow Creek. The idea was to build up the Meadow Creek run to compensate for the loss of the run in the Duncan River.

The research program cost about $300,000 and the man-made channel $308,000.

200,000 SPAWN

Normally only about 10 per cent of the eggs laid by the fish survive but with the ideal conditions provided in the artificial channel survival is expected to treble, said Withler.

The channel drew about 200,000 spawners when it was first opened.

Such artificial spawning grounds are still experimental and biologists are beginning to learn some of their drawbacks. Withler said spring freshets, for example, have been found to be necessary to clean the gravel where the fish lay their eggs.

Fast-Paced Show Full of Glitter

By SUSAN RILEY

Someone decided the Ice Capades should go psychedelic this year but it didn't quite come off.

The traditional numbers were all right and glittering costumes and brilliant sets were loudly applauded in a packed Memorial Arena Tuesday night.

But modern, bounce-type numbers don't work on skates. The music was too fast, the skaters too slow.

There is still a lot worth seeing, mainly Japanese champion Sashi Kuckiki and Canadian champion Don Knight.

Billed as an all-new show, the organizers, Metromedia, introduced a huge wall-size movie screen at one end of the arena on which mountains and faces occasionally appeared.

The clowns highlighted the show's first half. One stood 30 feet tall and lurched precariously at the side of the ice, bending over the side seats.

Roy and Sandi Wagelin, former members of the United States Olympic team, performed an Ice Ballet specially written for the show.

They were backgrounded by soft, romantic music and avoided fast-music gyrations which other numbers featured.

The Canadian-heavy cast also featured Marc Lebel, a 22-year-old from Hull, Quebec, who made his debut with a solo dance and jump number.

The Romanos, a group of foot-bound comedians, rode around the ice surface on bicycles which became progressively smaller.

On the whole the show was mixed entertainment, fast-paced and professionally presented.

Ice Capades will be in Victoria eight days.

Staff Shortage 'Critical' For Health Board Program

The Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health delivered another blast at the provincial government Tuesday because of its staff shortages.

The board detailed the needed staff more than a year ago but continues to be short.

The additional staff needed totals 26, of which 17 are listed as urgent.

The urgent positions, listed more than a year ago, include another medical health officer, five nurses, one nursing supervisor, three health inspectors, psychologist, audiologist, speech therapist and four clerks.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior medical health officer, said programs are being handicapped and the public short-changed and the province should increase its staff on the board.

The staff paid by Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt municipalities is satisfactory, he said. But they are having to be spread out to View Royal, half of Saanich municipality and Metchosin to make up for provincial deficiencies.

"We had to do this to make the service uniform," he explained.

"We all know the deficiency in staff is due to the fact that the provincial health department has not made available to us increased personnel as a result of increased population, increased services and increased regulations laid down for health inspectors to enforce.

NO PROVINCIAL REPLY

"Two years ago we asked for and got extra clerical staff from the city but nothing from the province.

"If there was sufficient provincial staff, then the municipal staff could get back to Victoria, Oak Bay, and Esquimalt and then there would be suficient staff in those areas.

"It appears to me that we will never get staff from the province until we put pressure on."

Big Oak Tree May Be Chopped

A big oak tree in the middle of a residential street provoked some strong feelings at Saanich public works committee Tuesday night.

Chop it down, said Ald. William Noel, after being told a resident on the Victoria side of the street complained his parked car has been hit twice by other vehicles near the tree.

"You can tell the election's over," joked Ald. Leslie Passmore who, with committee chairman Ald. William Campbell, wanted the tree to stay.

The tree is in the middle of Newton Street, between houses on the Victoria side and the 160-suite Newton Village apartments on the Saanich side.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said he didn't really care about the tree but about the cost of getting it out. Newton was a busy dead end street.

Engineer Neville Life said the cost of removing the old oak tree and filling in the hole would be $500 to $600.

The committee agreed that Life approach his opposite number in Victoria to get a no-parking regulation on the city side of the street, where the complaint originated.

Widow Gets $665,000

NEW YORK (AP) — An Albany woman was awarded $665,000 Monday as a result of her husband's death in an American Airlines crash near Cincinnati in November, 1965. Marjorie Kelleher brought suit in Manhattan Supreme Court against the airline. In December, 1967, a federal jury in Dallas held the airline liable for the Boeing 727 crash which killed 58 persons. Several other suits are pending.

Funds Needed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Community Services sent a letter to Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell Tuesday asking the provincial government to set up an agency to channel more federal government funds into public housing in British Columbia.

Royal Stopovers

OTTAWA (CP) — Queen Elizabeth will make two brief stops in Canada March 2 and two more May 3 and 4 on her way to and from visits to Australia and New Zealand, Government House announced Tuesday.

The royal aircraft will land at Ottawa's Uplands Airport at 1:30 p.m. EST March 2 for a 45-minute refuelling stop and then on to Vancouver where the Queen will spend the night.

On the return journey, May 3, the plane will make a one-hour refuelling stop at Vancouver and another at Gander, Nfld., early in the morning May 4.

The Queen will be accompanied by Princess Anne on the outward flight and will be joined by Prince Philip in Vancouver.

The new Mercedes-Benz 250: "At 80 mph, it's loafing."

The new Mercedes-Benz 250 is built to be driven, not just admired. As good as the 250 looks, it's no brittle showpiece. It was designed around people, not a styling theme. And on the open road it can run rings around its competitors.

The 250's top speed is comparable to any standard V-8, yet the engine delivers the fuel economy of a Six. This car was designed for European road conditions—where there are no speed limits—so it can't afford to be fragile. At legal speeds in Canada, the 250 is just loafing.

The 250's engine is built to aircraft tolerances. The bearings, for instance, are machined to 4/10,000ths of an inch. And, before it's installed, the engine is run-in for a minimum of one hour and 40 minutes. Maybe this engine is better than it has to be. Some critics have called the Mercedes-Benz 250 "over-engineered." It's true. And Mercedes-Benz is proud of it.

The new Mercedes-Benz 250 bristles with engineering innovations. A fully independent suspension system makes this 3,000-lb. sedan handle more like a sports car. Back road or superhighway, you're always in precise control. Standard equipment includes features like 4-wheel power disc brakes. And that handsome body is structurally sound: 10,000 welds squelch the squeals and rattles of conventional body bolts.

You owe it to yourself to look into the new Mercedes-Benz 250. It's on display in our showroom now. Come in for a demonstration drive today.

MOVE OVER, DEAR, seems to be the comment of button-buck yearling deer which wandered into the offices of a Pennsylvania trucking firm. City Sawmill May Lose Second Lease Victoria's public works committee today refused to change its mind and permit Ideal Sawmills to continue in operations.

The Tyee Road operation depends on a provincial government lease which is only granted with the blessings of the city.

Two weeks ago council asked the province not to renew the lease.

This morning the sawmill operators asked the committee to take another look at the original decision and promised to carry out seven major construction projects if the lease were renewed.

Ald. Clyde Savage suggested the operators be given the chance to carry out the proposed work—including toilet facilities, fences and the surfacing of driveways—and be granted a new lease only when the work was completed.

But the rest of the committee pointed out that over the years the company had been regularly requested to clean up its operation, had consistently promised to do so and equally consistently not carried out its promises.

Ald. Ian Stewart argued that the operators should have the lease cancelled for 90 days.

"If after 90 days they have done all they said they will do, we could renew the lease at that time," he said.

Other committee members were adamant. They felt the company over the past 15 years had been given more than ample time.

"I feel quite adamant about this," said Ald. Harold Olafson. "They have been asked time and time again to clean up the operation and they haven't done a thing. If we give them another 90 days I'm sure the situation will be the same."

Ald. Cecil Parrott said he had visited the Tyee Road property this morning.

"You'd think the least they could have done was get their lumber from overhanging the sidewalk," he said. "But they haven't. Lumber is still hanging out all over the place."

While refusing to recommend renewal of the lease the committee served warning that the same company's Bridge Street operation was also attracting detrimental observation.

"It's a disgrace," said Olafson. "Far worse even than Tyee Road."

Industry Needed

KELOWNA (CP)—If, as is predicted, there will be 80,000 people in the area of this Okanagan community in ten years, the city should begin now to plan for regional development, Hilbert Roth, the city's 42-year-old mayor-elect said Monday. This includes attracting suitable industry and providing better police protection, he said.

U.S. 'Bought' Marcos Army

By WARD JUST

WASHINGTON (WP) — In the fall of 1966, to a certain amount of fanfare in the United States, the Philippines sent a detachment of 2,200 men to South Vietnam to fight the war.

The unit was known as Philcag—Philippines Civic Action Group—and was cited by the Johnson administration as yet another example of the support the American position had from "the free world" on the rim of Asia.

At the time, President Johnson expressed his "deep satisfaction" and that of the American people at the evidence of Filipino support.

President Ferdinand Marcos, addressing a joint session of Congress in Washington, proposed an American defensive shield for non-Communist Asia.

He told the Congress: "Our object must be to hold the line in Vietnam and at least to roll back Communist power behind the 17th parallel."

To anyone who looked closely at it (and there were a few who did), the Marcos position seemed a speck contradictory. If he felt so strongly about rolling back Communist power, why was he committing only 2,200 troops to South Vietnam, and noncombatants at that?

Why were Americans not using Clark Air Base to fly bombing missions?

Well, now we have some of the answers from Sen. Stuart Symington's subcommittee on United States security agreements and commitments abroad, whose report on the Philippines was made public last week (reports on Thailand, Taiwan and Laos will follow).

Principal Preoccupation Is Cash

It is an extraordinary document, mixed with wonderful ironies and absurdities all of which combine to throw the United States into a lover's embrace with a country whose people probably don't want us around at all, and a government whose principal preoccupation is cash.

And why Philcag? The short answer is that the Johnson administration bought it lock, stock and barrel for payments totalling about $38 million.

The testimony shows the U.S. bound to the Philippines in a cat's cradle of alliance. Some of this is based on the SEATO treaty, some of it bilateral, related to (1) the maintenance of U.S. bases and (2) the supposed threat from China or the Soviet Union; other parts are based on the internal problems caused by the half-Communist, half-gangster apparatus of the Huks; still others appear to be obligations relating to Philcag.

It is extremely difficult to sort out which threat relates to which commitment, and vice versa. Is the air base at Mactan (maintained at $4 million a year, it has six sorties a day by U.S. aircraft, but is used by Philippine commercial airlines) kept as an auxiliary in case of Communist attack, as a payoff for Clark and Subic Bay, as a quid pro quo for Philcag, or merely because it is there?

Pay for Protection from Huks

Similarly, the Huks. There was this exchange between Senator Symington and Lt.-Gen. Robert H. Warren, deputy assistant secretary of defence for military assistance and sales:

Warren: (The U.S. aid) is also to help the Filipino forces to physically protect American forces (in the Philippines).

Symington: From whom?

Warren: Internally, sir; to maintain internal security and stability and, thereby, make our own activities over there more secure.

Symington: In other words we are paying the Philippine government to protect us from the Philippine people who do not agree with the policies of the government or who do not like Americans?

Warren: To a degree, yes, sir.

That U.S. aid included payment for a battalion of Philippine troops whose casualties in pursuit of the dreaded Huks have been less than a dozen, and many of those in non-war-related activities.

The Americans had supplied the Marcos government with a squadron of 23 F-5 fighter aircraft (cost: $15 million) and the rationale for that was that the Philippines would then be able to defend itself against attack.

There was this exchange between Symington and Lt.-Gen .Francis G. Gideon, commander of the American 12th Air Force at Clark Air Base:

Symington: ... Who would attack the Philippines from the air?

Gideon: The current principal threats are the Chicom air force and the U.S.S.R.

Symington: Where would the Soviet planes come from ...?

'Wave at Russian Planes?'

Gideon: Well, there are five or six bases ...

Symington: What type of plane would they use? They would have to use Bears or Bisons (two types of Soviet long-range aircraft).

Gideon: Yes, sir ...

Symington: That is a pretty theoretical danger .That plane is comparable to the old B-36. I imagine that danger scares you all pretty bad. What would you do as they went by places like Okinawa? Wave at them?

What emerges from this hearing is that the United States is paying the Philippines for the privilege of defending it against attack. Apart from the $38 million for Philcag, there is $22.5 million a year for military assistance, and beyond that the very considerable boost to the Philippine economy from the American bases — air force bases at Clark, Mactan, and John Hay, and naval bases at Subic, Sangley and San Miguel, among others.

In all, there are 20 American stations in the Philippines, which pump an estimated $150 million a year into the economy.

This is what has resulted from a treaty in 1947 which said that the two countries would act to meet outside threats "in accordance with its constitutional processes."

By 1964, the language had escalated to a point where an attack on the Philippines would be considered by the United States as an attack upon itself and, as such, "instantly repelled."

'Paid' for Their Sympathy

The bases grew along with the language, each keeping pace with the other and none of it reviewed by the Congress —which should have.

That would seem to be the point of Philcag. As Sen. J. W. Fulbright put it: "My own feeling is that all we did was go out and hire the soldiers in order to support our then-administration's view that so many people were in sympathy with our war in Vietnam, and we paid a very high price for it."

What is not generally understood about the Symington hearings is that an extraordinary amount of spadework has been needed to pry out what facts there are about U.S. commitment to the Philippines.

As it is, there are about two dozen blank pages in the report with only the word (deleted) to indicate what they contain.

In fact, they are investigative summaries of theft, assault, murder and homicide around the American bases.

The Philippine commitment acquired a momentum of its own, of a depth and variety out of all proportion to the need — as the military witnesses before the committee candidly conceded.

Collaborated in Lover's Embrace

State department officials with a stake in past policy, military officials with their hardware to deploy — all of them collaborated in the lover's embrace which costs U.S. taxpayers upwards of — what? — $30 million a year, $50 million?

And what of Philcag?

An American official with wide experience in South Vietnam was queried on the matter the other day, and replied: "Oh yes, Philcag. They operated in Tay Ninh province. They, ah, built one Potemkin village, which was largely to impress VIPS. They were very active in the PX. I think they built some roads ..."

The official might have added that in three years, the unit lost 8 killed and 17 wounded in an area considered hostile. Only recently, apparently anticipating the Symington committee report, President Marcos announced that the unit was being withdrawn.

He also said that there were no American payments for the maintenance of the unit in South Vietnam.

Someone ought to look into that.

Where did the $38 million go?

Association Stepping Stone To Council

By ELIZABETH FORBES

An interesting sidelight to last week's elections is the fact that both Frances Elford, mayor-elect of Oak Bay, and Edith Gunning, who led the aldermanic poll in Saanich, first became seriously involved in civic affairs through the Greater Victoria Association of Women Electors.

Forbes

The story goes back to 1962. Civic elections in the December before had seen one of the poorest turnouts on record. Not only that, the percentage of females who voted was woefully small.

These facts were disturbing, especially to the Victoria Business and Professional Women's Club, where one of the main objects is equal rights for women.

Early in 1962 this club invited members from many other clubs and circles in the area to join it in trying to overcome the apparent apathy in civic affairs.

★ ★ ★

In the next few months, this representative group met regularly to familiarize themselves with the Municipal Act and to decide on proper functions and objects of an organization that would (they hoped) spark interest and captivate the imagination of thinking women in Greater Victoria.

Toward the end of that same year the Association of Women Electors was formed.

Frances Elford and Edith Gunning were with the planning committee throughout those months of intensive study. Mrs. Gunning became first president of the association. At the end of her two-year term, she was elected to Saanich council Mrs. Elford helped form an Oak Bay division of the AWE and in 1963 ran for Oak Bay council and was elected.

Here let me make it perfectly clear, the AWE is not a militant association dedicated solely to placing women on councils and school boards.

★ ★ ★

Its objects and policy are to educate and inform concerning civic affairs; to encourage citizens to realize their responsibilities as voters and to arouse women to active interest in municipal government.

It is strictly non-partisan, non-sectarian and non-money making. It receives no gifts of money or services, to the association if acceptance of such gifts or services can in any manner be construed as tending to influence its activities or policies.

Each municipality has its own division headed by a chairman. These divisions work as a whole within the framework of the Greater Victoria body, with its elected officers.

Mrs. Charles L. Smith is the current president and Mrs. Lillian Wright, membership secretary.

★ ★ ★

The divisions meet once a month to discuss phases of civic government affecting their own municipalities. Each one has an official observer who attends council meetings in her own district.

These women are accredited. They receive council minutes and other pertinent material for study.

They report to their divisions on matters discussed by councils and explain how decisions were made.

Through this pattern of continuity, AWE members keep in touch with projects and problems affecting their own districts and with the different ways in which council members approach and handle such matters.

They also learn to talk intelligently on civic affairs.

★ ★ ★

At regular intervals the Greater Victoria association holds luncheon meeting where knowledgable speakers present their views on such subjects as amalgamation, pollution, the library question, education, municipal responsibilities parklands and recreation, drugs and social welfare.

Study circles are formed. Briefs are prepared and where it is deemed sensible, civic and provincial leaders are approached with well thought out suggestions and constructive ideas.

At present the association has a hard core of 155 dedicated members. However, to work effectively and to increase the prestige it has gained in the past seven years, it needs many more active and sustaining members.

Any woman who is genuinely interested in the objects and policy of the group is eligible to join. There is a small fee, simply to cover printing of monthly bulletins and other material.

DEMONSTRATION EXPECTED THURSDAY

'Something' Cooking at Buildings

Members of the B.C. Government Employees Union have "something" planned here for noon Thursday in their effort to win collective bargaining rights from the provincial government.

•

John L. Fryer, union general secretary, declined to say whether it would be a little or a big something but said it would take place "weather permitting."

A demonstration at the Legislative Buildings is believed to be planned.

Fryer said the point of the demonstration could be lost if it were revealed in advance.

He was interviewed following a lengthy session with the provincial Civil Service Commission in which the 13,000-member union put forward its salary proposals for 1970.

The commission will prepare studies of its own to compare with the union's proposals which seek average wage increases of 12 per cent, with up to 17 per cent for clerks.

Another meeting will be held in six weeks.

If Premier Bennett follows tradition he will announce the increase in funds available for civil service pay at a luncheon Monday at which long-service employees of the government will be honored.

•

Fryer said the issue of collective bargaining rights was not discussed with the commission because it is a cabinet matter.

A letter from the office of Provincial Secretary Wesley Black has told the union its request for a meeting with the government will be dealt with by the cabinet.

Fryer said it would have been "inappropriate" for the union delegation to attempt to see Black Tuesday without an invitation.

He said a major campaign is being mounted for bargaining rights and it will probably reach a peak early in the new year — about the same time as the campaign for salary increases hits its peak.

But at the moment, he added, the issue is whether the government will sit down with the union and talk.

•

CHRISTMAS MAIL already is piling up in the temporary post office set up in the Bay Street Armory to handle what will become a flood in the next couple of weeks. Some 500 part-time helpers have been hired to help sort incoming and outgoing mail. The post office says Saturday is deadline for mail destined for Central Canada and next Wednesday the deadline for local mail.

$45 Million Hospital Vote Set for Spring

By JIM HUME

Property owners in the regional district will vote on a $45 million-$50 million acute care hospital referendum this spring.

Of that total $1.8 million will be earmarked, if the referendum is approved, to purchase the St. Ann's Academy property to make way for expansion of St. Joseph's Hospital.

APPRAISED

The Sisters of St. Ann have informed the board that appraised value of the property has been set at $1,587,000.

This morning, along with publication of major plans for hospital development, the Capital Region District Hospital Board agreed to open negotiations for the property.

The final sale, and the plans for acute-care bed construction, hinge entirely on a "yes" vote when property owners throughout the region go to the polls, probably next March.

At a special meeting of the district board this morning members were told St. Joseph's would be built up to a 640-bed hospital while Jubilee over the next five to seven years would reach a 660-bed capacity.

$18.7 MILLION

Estimated cost to bring St. Joseph's up to maximum capacity has been estimated at $18.7 million.

Jubilee, with no detailed projections of cost yet prepared, is expected to cost between $20 and $25 million.

Following the meeting board officials said with Rest Haven replacement and other costs added the referendum would bring the total close to $50 million.

Excluded from the referendum will be proposals for a 200-bed acute-care facility in the vicinity of McKenzie Avenue.

CEILING

Mayor Ray Bryant of Esquimalt said when St. Joseph's and Jubilee were raised to their 640 and 660-bed marks they would have reached a ceiling beyond which expansion would not go.

"What we are doing here is putting a ceiling on development on the major hospitals in Victoria," he said. "Once these sizes are reached any other hospitals built must be elsewhere."

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis asked whether it was to be presumed that the hospital's executive committee's recommendations "would indicate no major action on the third hospital site until this program is completed?"

Academy Site Tag $1.5M

"That is so," answered the chairman, Mayor Hugh Stephen.

Stephen said later that if the referendum is approved he estimated it would take between five and seven years to complete the major programs at St. Joseph's, Jubilee and Rest Haven.

Rest Haven is scheduled to become a 75-bed acute-care, 75-bed extended-care hospital.

Saanich Ald. Edith Gunning expressed a feeling of relief that a ceiling had been placed on the expansion of the two major hospitals.

"Many have felt that Jubilee and St. Joseph's would just expand and expand," she said. "But this proposal is clear cut."

After the proposals were endorsed by the full board, Stephen asked for a formal motion to pay tribute to the Sisters of St. Ann.

"BEYOND WORDS"

"For 100 years they have cared for the sick and needy in this area," he said. "They have deeded and given as a gift to the people the existing hospital. Their love, care and affection is beyond words.

"We could go into the discussion as to how much public money has gone into the hospital, but the fact remains that the hospital belonged to the sisters and they have deeded it to the public."

The board unanimously approved the resolution of appreciation for past services and the gift of the existing facilities.

Small Painting Fetches $14,600

More than 250 persons watched a small painting of a Cree Indian sell for $14,600 at Lunds Auctioneers on Tuesday.

It was the climax of a 3½-hour sale of paintings which saw 245 works of art fetch a total of $101,000.

The painting which caused the most excitement was by Charles Russell, a 19th century U.S. artist who painted the old west. He was born in 1865 in St. Louis, Mo.

A mounted Indian and a mounted cowboy, also by Russell, sold for $8,700 and $8,500 respectively, while the price paid for an illustrated envelope by the artist was $3,700.

★ ★ ★

Altogether the Russell paintings realized a total of $36,500.

Names of the buyers were not disclosed by auctioneer Wilf Lund but he said all but one were from the United States.

Other paintings which brought high prices were by A. Y. Jackson, J. E. H. MacDonald and Arthur Lismer, members of Canada's Group of Seven.

Sale price of the works ranged from $2,600 to $245.

While the prices paid for these works were much too high for the majority of art lovers, many excellent paintings sold for less than $100.

Saanich Chief Shocked by Report 3,210 Students Have Smoked Pot

A police chief said today he was shocked by figures in a survey of drug use by Greater Victoria secondary students.

And an RCMP officer said the seven-month-old survey does not take into account shifts in availability of various drugs.

Chief W. A. Pearson of the Saanich Police said it is "absolutely shocking" that 22.3 per cent of 1,002 students surveyed said they had smoked or are still smoking marijuana.

"That means out of 14,795 pupils 3,210 have used it and 1,751 kids could be considered regular users."

Chief Pearson insisted marijuana smoking could lead to use of stronger addictive drugs.

Cpl. Dan Creally, director of the RCMP drug squad for Victoria, said since the survey was taken last April hashish has replaced marijuana as the major drug.

"That's the main thing that's indicative of the change in the past year — hash seems to have taken over from marijuana."

Both policeman praised the survey which was released Tuesday at a press conference at the Greater Victoria school board headquarters.

John Russell, a research associate at the Narcotic Addiction Foundation in Vancouver, and the man who directed the survey, said while there may have been a change of emphasis in the kind of drugs used by young people, incidence has not necessarily risen.

STRONGER

No distinction was made in the survey between marijuana and its resinous derivative hashish. Police say hashish is stronger than the weed, but smokers say they get the same kind of high from both.

Barbiturates were also not included in the survey.

The survey, prepared by the addiction foundation and released Tuesday, showed out of 1,002 in a questionnaire sampling only 303 — most of them marijuana smokers—said they had ever used drugs.

The survey did not attempt to find out why drugs are used. Its 49 tables simply show the incidence of drug use among students according to sex and age groupings.

Drugs included marijuana, glue, LSD, methedrine, solvents, heroin and tranquilizers.

Russell, who also directed NAF surveys for five other school districts, was at the Tueday press conference at school board headquarters.

He said it would be unwise to label the survey findings "bad" because young people who use the drugs generally see them as good.

Drugs are an aspect of pop culture, he said, and its leaders — Timothy Leary and the Beatles — have sanctioned their use as one way of finding a better way of life.

GUIDE BOARD

Superintendent of schools A. J. Longmore said the survey will guide the board in modifying its drug education program.

E. G. Callbeck, co-ordinator of special education services, noted while Vancouver is considered a drug production and distribution centre, drug use has not proliferated here.

Of the 1,002 students surveyed 22.2 per cent said they have smoked marijuana; 68 students said they have used LSD; 33 students methedrine; 17 students heroin; and 133 glue or solvents.

The figures indicate that while only a handful of students had used addictives such as methedrine (speed) and heroin at the time the survey was made — April 24 and 25 — even fewer said they were still using them.

The same is true for glue: while more than 100 students said they had sniffed glue, only nine said they were still doing so.

Twenty-two per cent said they had used tranquilizers obtained with a prescription, but most of them fell into the once-a-year bracket; 7.7 per cent said they had used non-prescription tranquilizers.

Callbeck attributed the declining use of methedrine, heroin and LSD and the decline in glue-sniffing to the increased amount of information on effects.

Ask The Times

Q. What was the original idea behind lowering a flag to half-mast, and when did the practice start? I have been able to come up with two theories—both highly unlikely. One is that the space between the top of the flag and the top of the pole was left for the pennant of the angel of death. The other is that the space was where a portion of the flag had been torn off to be used as a shroud for the coffin. — A.M.

A. There are several theories, none of which can be fully substantiated. However, one of the most feasible is that the custom began in the early 17th century when the Royal Navy and other forces were engaged in battle on the high seas. When a ship surrendered it lowered its colors to half-mast. Service regulations, which state that the colors shall only be lowered as a signal of respect, courtesy, mourning or disaster appear to support this theory. It would seem a natural sequence that disaster, once meaning a surrender of a ship, would graduate to also signalling the death of a sovereign or leader.

SAANICH MAN KILLED AFTER SHOPPING TRIP

A 76-year-old Saanich man died in hospital Tuesday night three hours after he was hit by a car when he tried to push his bicycle across the Trans-Canada Highway at Wascana.

Police say George Maw, 75 Battleford, was returning home from a shopping trip when the accident occurred about 5 p.m.

The driver of the car, identified by police as John F. Crossley, 61, of 748 Audley, was travelling east on the highway when Maw started across the road.

Police said Maw's purchases were in the carrier on the bicycle. He had been to a store several blocks from home and was on his way back.

New Chancellor Known Tonight

The next chancellor of the University of Victoria will be known tonight.

Official deadline for the return of ballots was Tuesday. They were counted today.

Uvic graduates have voted for one of three candidates running for the chancellor's post and nine candidates for six senate seats.

Chancellor candidates are lawyer Lloyd McKenzie, author-judge Roderick Haig-Brown and student Bob Higinbotham.

Results are expected to be announced at tonight's senate meeting.

NEW TUG FOR HARBOR

The newest addition to Island Tug and Barge Ltd.'s fleet arrived this morning.

The 65-foot Port Alfred is two years old and will be used mainly for harbor duties.

Formerly on the east coast, she made her way to Victoria through the Panama Canal.

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS cards have trickled in, and if they represent par for the Yuletide course, I'm halfway convinced we should call the whole thing off. Where's the seasonal jollity? Where are the candles, stars, poinsettias and holly?

One of these determinedly untraditional cards is an artist's conception of lower Government Street. It's nicely done, but it is about as Christmasy as the first of July.

★

The colors run strong to brown, grey and washed-out blue; in fact the only bright touch is supplied by a peppering of little red crosses and question-marks. These, according to the reader who sent the card along, indicate where the artist took liberties with his subject matter.

This is the spirit of Christmas? If so, it leaves me cold. I'm for camels, shepherds and carolers.

But at least, it's preferable to the family news roundup, a multigraphed, single-spaced, triple-folded, wife-scrivened exercise in reportage that masquerades as a Christmas greeting.

★

No matter how dear the senders, the mere sight of yet another such breezy mass communication is enough to topple me out of my tree.

On the chance that you haven't yet been subjected to a family news-letter I'll prepare you for the inevitable by manufacturing a sample:

Dear Friends:

Well, here we all are again after another perfectly wonderful year to bring you up to date on our little adventures. So much water has flowed under the bridge, as we say in our family circle, ha-ha, that we hardly know where to begin.

First, you will be delighted to know that Art continues to forge ahead in his chosen profession. (Interpreted, this means that they shifted my desk three feet.) Also, Your Scribe has undertaken a fascinating new linguistic endeavor (which is to say is that Win invested our $20 Expo 70 savings on a beginner's course in Japanese.) We have embarked on a bout of home improvement (finally broke down and treated our TV to a new picture-tube) and have adopted the healthful practice of taking a brisk morning and evening stroll.

In plain English rather than the rarified terms of the family news letter, we walk the dog.

★

So much for the sample, which I trust will explain my phobia against these annual burbles.

Our mailbox lid has just creaked open and clanged shut. Against expectation, I hope the day's take includes just one honest-to-pete card in colors that delight the eye.

With holly on it, or a Christmas tree, or maybe even camels.

WHILE TROLLING FOR spring salmon that wouldn't bite, Anne E. Anderson of 2307 Howard Street amused herself by stringing together limericks against the time when the sponsors of a current Back-East limerick contest draw a bead on Victoria.

★

Mrs. Anderson offers one of her limericks for a try-out:

'When Victoria honors her day
High-rises will shadow the way,
Amid new instant slums
Will sound bagpipes and drums
Where past charms have been blasted away.'

The writer explains that she isn't "agin progress", but is violently opposed to "the gluttonous tearing down of fine old houses and replacing them with match boxes and domino towers."

Up to a point, I agree. I also hope that the towers of vertical housing will be confined to areas that stand to benefit from their presence.

But time brings change, and like it or not, I expect the years ahead will see many more of those fine old places disintegrate in clouds of plaster-dust.

They were built for large families; and increasingly, the small-to-medium family becomes the rule.

The sad fact is that a city must alter to meet the requirements forced upon it by its era. Even Victoria.

★

My own guess is that as our population increases and the demand for building sites grows heavier, we'll be lucky if a mere few of the big old houses survive.

A pity—but that, I think, is the shape of our future.

Poor Win Credit Plan

By ROBERT J. SAMUELSON

WASHINGTON (WP) — The United States sixth largest retailing company—Montgomery Ward—has agreed to supply credit to the poor, including welfare recipients, on a one-year, experimental basis.

The trial program—probably the largest ever undertaken—will cover more than 3,000 people in eight major cities, including Washington.

Nearly a year's intermittent negotiations between Montgomery Ward and the National Welfare Rights Organization preceeded the agreement.

New customers will initially receive $100 minimum monthly payment of $5, and interest charges of 1 per cent a month (18 per cent a year) on unpaid bills—conform with Montgomery Ward's regular practices.

●

Participation in the program will be restricted to members of NWRO. Leaders of the national group, which now claims 75,000 to 100,000 members, regard the credit agreement as an effective means of building and strengthening their organization.

Under the agreement, NWRO will submit the names of prospective credit customers, but Montgomery Ward retains the final authority to accept or reject. NWRO originally proposed that the organization's approval suffice for the store to provide credit.

"As far as we were concerned, that was out of the question," one company official said. Instead, the company agreed to inform NWRO—with the applicant's approval—of any rejections and allow an appeal.

"Wards also will advise NWRO of the name of the credit bureau, if any, whose report was used as a basis for the rejection," Ashley D. Deshazor, the company's vice-president for credit, said.

"One of our arguments during negotiations was that normal credit-checking practices are inadequate for the poor," and NWRO official said. "The only way we'll prove that is going through a number of appeals."

●

He cited the example of a woman whose credit rating might be impaired as a result of bills unpaid by a husband who had abandoned her.

The granting of credit will apparently be preceded by an introduction from local Ward credit managers, who will stress ways customers can "make their dollars go that much further." The times of seasonal and special sales will be highlighted, according to the store.

The company attached far more importance to the education than NWRO, which believes the credit availability—not instruction—is the main problem of the poor.

NWRO has also been pressing Sears Roebuck, the largest retailer in the U.S. to implement a credit program. Last year, Montgomery Ward, whose official corporate name is Marcor, had $2.5 billion in sales, against $8.1 billion for Sears.

The other cities involved in the experiment will be Baltimore, Chicago, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Detroit, Dallas, Fort Worth, and Oakland.

NOT WHAT IT SEEMS TO BE—This isn't an overly friendly lioness or a particularly brave man. It's Terence M. Pupils Pass Driver's Test To Get Bicycle Licences

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — School children in this Toronto-area community are going to get driver's licences for their bicycles.

The program sponsored by the town's safety council will involve 35,000 public and separate school children.

The licences will not have any legal status, but they are expected to have a strong psychological impact upon the children. In order to obtain one the child must first pass driving tests on bicycle handling and safety.

A 15-point demerit system has also been devised. Points can be lost for things like riding double, failing to obey traffic signs and riding at night without lights. Police plan to seek parents' co-operation in taking their child's bike away from him, if he loses his points, until he passes a new driving test.

The training program which is conducted in the schools is taught by police constables Lendo Maritan and David Yakichuk of the safety division.

"We hope this will make Mississauga the safest town in Canada," said Constable Maritan.

The courses are conducted using small toy autos. The children drive the cars through a pattern of streets, using hand signals taught to them in the classroom.

Upon completion of the preliminary safety classes, using the toy cars, the children must then take tests with their bicycles to earn their drivers' licences.

Those who pass the bicycle safety tests will also be given a cloth badge to wear on a jacket.

Found Guilty

KELOWNA (CP) — Laurel Pflieger, 18, of nearby Rutland, Tuesday was found guilty of driving without due care and attention when she appeared in provincial court in connection with an accident Sept. 10 in which three teen-age girls, passengers in the car she was driving, were killed. She was remanded to Jan. 9 for sentence.

DREDGING ENDANGERS WHOOPING CRANES

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP) — Claiming that oyster shell dredging by five Texas companies is endangering the lives of 55 surviving whooping cranes, the National Audubon Society has filed suit to stop it.

The society filed the suit in federal court Monday against the Texas parks and wildlife department and the companies.

Uvic Applauds Pint-Sized Choir

By JANE CHAPIN

"How much time do we have?" the choir conductor asked the sound technician midway through the Christmas concert.

"Twenty minutes," came the reply.

A loud male voice boomed from the audience. "We'll stay all afternoon!"

The singers were members of the 70-voice Monterey Elementary School Choir and the loud male voice belonged to a University of Victoria student, one of 100 who liked the informal manner in which director Mrs. Lorna Griffiths handled her charges at the university noon-hour concert.

The children sang carols in two part harmony, then Mrs. Griffiths announced the next number, The Twelve Days of Christmas, and added, "The kids don't know yet who gets the solos."

The children gasped, giggled and pointed at each other.

"You see them shaking in their boots," Mrs. Griffiths said. The audience laughed spontaneously as she designated the 12 solo parts to each child, then clapped loudly when the singers handled the music with gusto and aplomb.

The girls wore white dresses and sparkling Christmas corsages, the boys dark trousers and white shirts, and all were smiling.

Near the end of the program Mrs. Griffiths turned to the audience, "All right, your turn now with Silent Night. And you'd better be in good voice."

The accompanist struck a chord.

"All right, let 'er rip!"

She walked up and down the aisles.

"Open those mouths." She pointed to a woman sitting in the fourth row. "Wider."

All songs by the choir were sung from memory.

Women's Canadian Club Marks 60th Year

On June 28, 1909, 61 Victoria women gathered to sign the charter of the Women's Canadian Club of Victoria.

According to the original records a meeting was called with Mrs. C. Fitzgibbon in the chair:

"Mr. A. E. McPhillips addressed the meeting on the advantages accruing nationally and socially through the organization of patriotic clubs of both men and women, pointing out the vast field of service in the building up of Imperial Canada, in which field women have a distinctive place."

In short order the club was formed and the first executive elected included Mrs. G. H. Barnard as president and Mrs. James Dunsmuir, wife of the lieutenant-governor, as honorary president.

To quote from the brief history of the club prepared in 1930 when the club celebrated its 21st birthday, "Thus the Women's Canadian Club of Victoria was duly launched and set forth on its patriotic mission."

Friday at 3 p.m. in the Empress Hotel the Club will celebrate their 60th year with a Christmas tea and musical program.

During the early years of the club, activities included entertaining distinguished visitors, securing speakers and participating in local community enterprises.

Mrs. James Dunsmuir, first honorary president of the Women's Canadian Club of Victoria, and her youngest daughter, Dola, are shown in this Alice Hughes portrait. Following tradition, Mrs. John Nicholson, as wife of the lieutenant-governor, is the current honorary president.

The first luncheon, a financial flop when poor transportation cut the expected attendance of 75 down to 40, honored Agnes Deans Cameron, Victoria teacher, author and traveller.

The outbreak of the First World War set the members to work. A Returned Soldiers' Fund was created and raised about $10,000—$6,468.81 being raised in one day.

The avenue of maple trees leading to the entrance of Victoria High School was given by the club as a memorial to students who went overseas, and to commemorate the battle of Ypres. The club also presented the school with a silk banner with white stars and crimson banners to represent nurses and students who served at the front.

In the Second World War the club raised $1,000 for a mobile canteen, collected wool for blankets, helped furnish a hostel at Garden Head, sold War Savings Stamps at meetings and prepared emergency packets of clothing in case of a bombing of Victoria.

One of the most ambitious projects the Victoria Women's Canadian Club undertook was the publication of "The Pioneer Women of Vancouver Island," dedicated to the "brave women who, amid dangers, often enduring many deprivations, and lonely in their isolation, contributed in no small degree to the early settlement of Vancouver Island." (21st birthday resume)

This first book dealt with the women of the Island's Crown Colony days, 1843 to 1866. A second history dealing with pioneer women from 1866 to 1900 is currently being compiled by Canadian Club member Elizabeth Forbes.

There are many famous names in a list of past presidents of the Canadian Club.

The first president, Mrs. G. H. Barnard was the wife of Senator Barnard whose Rockland Avenue home is now Mary Manor. Mrs. Margaret Jenkins, a noted educator, is remembered by the school that bears her name, and many people remember Miss Kathleen Agnew, philanthropist.

Mrs. P. B. Scurrah, wife of the former mayor, is on the list as is Mrs. H. P. Hodges, first woman speaker in a British Commonwealth legislature, and Mrs. W. H. (Alderman Lily) Wilson.

The club also lists many distinguished figures among their guests such as Emily Carr, Arthur Lismer, Stephen Leacock, Sir Ernest McMillan, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and Lady Baden-Powell.

Mrs. D. Leslie Macdonell is currently the president of the Women's Canadian Club of Victoria. (Photo by Gibson Studio.)

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

"You'll be pleased to learn there's not a thing wrong with it that money can't fix."

'Men Only' Job Restrictions Force Educated Women Into Clerical Work

TORONTO (CP) — Waste of highly qualified women university graduates is untenable on economic grounds, Sylvia Gelber, director of the women's bureau for the federal labor department, said this week.

Speaking at an institute on "new directions for women" organized by the Beth Tzedec Sisterhood, Miss Gelbert said women university graduates make up more than one third of all university graduates and form an important part of Canada's highly qualified manpower resources.

Yet they occupied only 12.6 per cent of managerial positions in industry in 1968. Women doing clerical work accounted for almost 70 per cent of those employed.

"In other words, it would seem that we educate our women only to make use of their highly skilled qualifications for clerical jobs," she said.

Miss Gelber said that women graduating from many Canadian universities in 1970 would not even get the chance to be interviewed by representatives of some of the biggest firms in the country who recruited to fill potential managerial vacancies.

A male graduate would be helped to apply for any of the 3,268 vacancies for university graduates outlined in the Canada Careers Directory for University Graduates, a handbook provided free to university graduates through the cooperation of Canadian organizations.

But a female graduate whose academic qualifications equalled those of her fellow student, would be able to apply for only 1,244 of these vacancies.

"The woman graduate . . . will find that the same university where she was educated and which in many instances is in receipt of some public funds, operates a placement service . . . which co-operates with industry in enforcing the limiting sex qualification prescribed by the recruiting firms," Miss Gelber said.

MANY SUBSIDIARIES

The fact that one-third of the listed vacancies were available to either male or female graduates might be because the list included certain government agencies, some of which were subject to employment legislation forbidding discrimination on sex grounds.

Many recruiting organizations were subsidiaries of United States firms whose own parent organization could not under U.S. law prescribe the same sex qualifications.

Miss Gelber said industry has not produced statistical evidence — particularly relating to women in managerial positions — to back up allegations that women are not good long-term investments or that they have higher sickness rates than men.

A text of Miss Gelber's speech was released in advance of delivery.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Go on a Diet

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am sitting here, drinking my eighth cup of coffee and feeling very depressed. I need someone to talk to so I am writing to you.

Three weeks ago I lost my job, and since then I've been all over Chicago looking for work, but I haven't had any luck.

I see a sign in the window saying Help Wanted, so I go inside and the receptionist takes one look at me and says, "Sorry, we aren't hiring right now."

I know why I get turned down without even an interview. I am fat.

Abby, can't people be a little kinder and just let me fill out the application blank? Then at least I'd feel like I was getting some place.

Just because a woman is fat doesn't mean she can't work. In fact, a fat person would probably work twice as hard just to prove she can produce.

Well, Abby, I'm off again, looking for a job. I honestly feel a little better being able to tell this to somebody. Thanks for listening.—Your Fat Friend

DEAR FRIEND: A friend does more than listen. He speaks out when there is something his friend needs to hear.

Feeling sorry for yourself won't land you a job. And don't expect some kind-hearted soul to put you on his payroll out of charity for the obese. Face it, most fat women are not as attractive as their normal sisters. And they're not as healthy, either. They may be jollier, or better sports because they know they are Number Two and must try harder.

And since no one wants to be fat, those who are lugging a lot of excess weight may as well wear a sign saying, "I have no self-control."

So, do yourself a favor, and quit asking for compassion on the part of others. See your doctor, and get on a diet. And if you can't do it alone, get in touch with Tops or Weight Watchers.

(P.S.: If your obesity is due to a glandular disorder or a condition which you are helpless to control, forgive me, this letter is not for you.)

DEAR ABBY: Helen (not her real name) and I have been married for 14 years and have five children. We are both 36 years old.

A while ago Helen joined a group therapy group. You know, people just sit around and talk about their problems. Well, Helen is the only married person in the group.

One evening a fellow from the group picked Helen up and drove her to one of these meetings. He brought her home at 1:30 a.m. Helen said they stopped for a cocktail on the way home. Another time Helen accepted a dinner invitation with another man from the group.

She says she is innocent of any wrong-doing. I believe her, but I feel her conduct is a potential threat to our marriage. Am I wrong to object.—Old Fashioned.

DEAR OLD FASHIONED: No. Every group therapy group has a therapist. Talk to Helen's, and ask him how you should handle this problem.

DEAR ABBY: For years I have been driving four neighbor girls and my daughter to school ever day. I decided not to join a car pool because I figure as long as I am driving anyway I may as well take a car full. Incidentally, we have a nice new car with six seat belts and I am as dependable as a clock.

We've lived in this neighborhood for many years and I know all the parents, but I don't see them socially. Of course all the mothers know that I chauffeur their children every morning because I pick them up at their doors.

Now I don't want a medal or anything, but when I meet one of the mothers in the market or at PTA, not one mother has ever said thank you to me.

If parents are so thoughtless about showing their appreciation for a good deed, is it any wonder that these children think the world owes them a living?

This has been on my mind for a long time, and if you print this, it may wake up a few mothers. But please don't use my name or location—Irritated.

Gladys Finds Shop With Trims Galore

By PENNY SAVER

The worst part of dressmaking is getting a perfect fit and marking the hem, so all us girls turned Gladys' living room into a workroom and pinched in each others' darts all afternoon.

"Sparkle, baby, sparkle!" said my daughter as our hostess slunk out of the change room in a gold brocade sheath that we had carefully moulded to her body. "How long: to the ankles or brushing your instep?"

"Ankles. I'm going to rim hem, neckline and sleeves in rabbit fur," was the unexpected reply.

"Where did you get the rabbit fur?"

"Same place I got this material. You all know the shop well, but I'll bet you haven't been in there lately. The trimmings they have bought for the Christmas season!

"They have furs . . . not just the rabbit I bought but also mouton, which is a closer, neater fur, both in white for $1.98 a yard. And Persian lamb in grey, brown, or black at $1.98 a yard for 1¼ inch wide and $2.98 for 2½ inches wide.

"And fringes, four and six inches wide, for go-go dancer dresses. It comes in white and black and ranges from $1.89 to $2.69 a yard depending on the width.

"As you know, this shop always carries a wide selection of braids, woven and plaited; plain and metallic. Metallic braids, one would think, would be dressy enough for anyone, but no, they have brought in some special ones designed just for holiday outfits.

"There is one I saw for $4.95 a yard that is based on an intricate gold and silver braid. Spaced along this there are clusters of huge silver sequins and each cluster is centred by a group of faceted crystals. Between these crystal and sequin groups there is a smattering of colored rhinestones and tiny gold leaves.

"For $3.98 a yard there are metallic braids covered in sequins of all sizes.

"The shop has gypsy ropes for $2.49 each. You, Mathilda and Penny, would be much more likely to call these monk's cords.

"They are colored twisted ropes of a soft sort of shiny yarn with tassels on each end and can be wrapped in hair, used as a belt, twined around arms or legs . . . anything that pleases.

"And, of course, if you want to make your own trim patterns they have sequins and beads at all prices, tassels at 25 cents each, frog closings of every description, buttons to match any cloth . . . everything the home sewer might need to complete her holiday outfit."

Please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 12 noon if you would like to know where Gladys found all these items.

TODAY'S RECIPE

FROZEN FRUIT PUDDINGS

One 6-ounce bottle maraschino cherries, chopped; ½ cup seedless raisins, ¼ cup water, ½ cup finely sliced dates, ¼ cup finely chopped citron peel, ¼ cup finely chopped, mixed glazed fruit, 1 tablespoon brandy (optional), ¼ cup slivered, toasted almonds, 1 quart rich vanilla ice cream.

Drain cherries and save juice. Simmer raisins 5 minutes in water, covered; drain. Add fruits, peel, cherry juice and brandy; cover and let stand 24 hours. Add nuts. Turn ice cream into a chilled bowl and beat to soften slightly, but not enough to melt. Stir in fruit mixture and pack quickly into chilled individual molds. Cover and freeze until firm (about 4 hours). Unmold by dipping molds into cold water for a few seconds. (Makes 8 servings.)

SEW SIMPLE

By EUNICE FARMER

Here's a great "security blanket" for your boys and girls as they grow a little older. It goes with any type decor of their rooms and makes a wonderful Christmas gift idea.

There's nothing quite like the feel of fur to stir warmth in even the toughest little guys. Cover pillows in fake fur and you'll have a friend for life.

You may buy inexpensive pillows or use ones that have out-lived their covers. Either make a slip-cover type cover with a zipper on one end, or if you can't sew or don't want to spend that much time, simply hand whip the fur cloth to the pillow.

Even an amateur can make this look professional because the fur hides a multitude of errors. After the seams have been stitched, pull out the fur fibres from the seams on the right side and the seam will be completely disguised.

Television Wins Spending Trend

TOKYO (AP) — The government's health and welfare ministry says Japan has the population problem in reverse—too low a birth rate, which may thin out the labor force. The agency says people would rather spend money on furniture and television sets than on children.

Special Packet of Spices Travels With Skating Gourmet

By JUDI FREEMAN

A gourmet cook generally has a stock of exotic spices, a market place where he is known to all the sellers and a kitchen he can call his own.

Jorge Valle doesn't have a kitchen; he goes to new shops in different cities every week and his spice collection fits into a small package tucked into his trunk.

Jorge is a gourmet cook with his own speciality: Indonesian dishes.

Jorge's hobby of exotic cookery grew from his travels through Europe as a professional skater and his studies in Garmisch, West Germany.

He is now starring with his wife Helga in the Ice Capades production, currently showing in Victoria's Memorial Arena.

"I love eating and I made it a point to ask chefs about their dishes almost everywhere I went," he said.

It was at Garmisch where he met his wife and, through her and her mother-in-law, learned a bit about Viennese cooking.

"My mother-in-law couldn't speak English and I used to watch her cook in her Vienna kitchen. To learn what she was doing I had to pick up German.

"And the Viennese accent is something else," he said with a wry grin.

Jorge was born in Boston and raised in Miami, missing the northern childhood sports of hockey and ice skating.

"I was 17 when the first rink was built. I took up skating as relief from hot summer days," he recalled.

"Three years later I auditioned and won a part in my first ice show. I was never an amateur."

Jorge has been travelling ever since.

While in Holland he discovered Indonesian food and has been cooking delicacies ever since with the help of a translated Dutch cookbook.

Undaunted by life lived out of suitcases and trunks the Valles check into apartment-hotels, taking advantage of the kitchenettes as often as possible.

ICE CAPADES STAR JORGE VALLE

For Jorge, cooking Rice Tafels is his relief from the routine of daily practices, nightly shows and travels to another city.

"Indonesian curry is my favorite but it is quite tricky because of the spices," he said. Unable to find some of them in some cities, the Valles carry a few, wrapped in plastic, with them.

"We have to pack them carefully. Otherwise the whole trunk smells like a spice cabinet."

Rice tafels is made from pork meat and is served with sabal, a hot peppered sauce.

"I have to be careful when I add spices. Sometimes my wife complains because I like them so hot. But then, you can ruin a dish with excess spice.

"And I've also learned to undercook a recipe as I keep experimenting. The dishes are usually better that way."

Does Helga ever get a chance to cook?

Yes. Jorge said her Paprika Chicken is the best he's tasted and her Viennese cooking is so good he has to watch his weight.

Alberta Farmhouse Headquarters of Ad Agency

EDMONTON (CP) — It's like Green Acres on television—only better, say a former Edmonton couple who took to country living.

Bert and Scotty Nightingale, a man-and-wife advertising team, conduct their business from Trail's End, a treed and rolling 20-acre spread near Barrhead, 50 miles northwest of Edmonton.

They are proving that a metropolitan address is not essential for earning a city-style living, that city folk can adapt readily to country living, and that the cost of housing can be licked.

The Nightingales visit Edmonton twice a week to meet clients, pick up assignments and return finished work.

"We keep in touch with clients and production houses by telephone between visits and since we're only an hour's drive from the city we can nip in on short notice when we have to."

Of course, there were adjustments.

"We get our water from a well," Mr. Nightingale said. "And we've had to get acquainted with a septic tank and party lines.

"But it's hardly pioneering. The well water is pumped to the house through a unit that gives us water so soft you hardly need soap. We have television—all electrical appliances in fact. And costs are way down."

Mrs. Nightingale said it was weeks before she got used to looking out the windows at night and seeing, instead of city lights, just blackness broken only by a yard light miles away.

"Living in the country is a dream we've had for years," said Mr. Nightingale.

They have had several homes in Edmonton, trying to stay on the outskirts.

"But as the city grew, downtown always seemed to follow us. Finally we decided the time was ripe to head for the hills."

They investigated several areas in northern Alberta but finally decided on Barrhead, where Mrs. Nightingale's family had pioneered in the early 1900s.

They found Trail's End last October—a 40-year-old house, a huge cattle barn, poultry house, hog barn, double garage and several fenced corrals.

The land rolls gently from the house down to the wooded bank of the Paddle River, a stream that forms the south boundary of the property. All utilities were in and a gravelled road that ends near the house is kept open year-round for the school bus.

"We negotiated over the winter, put our city house up for sale in February and made the move in May. Proceeds from the city property paid off the mortgage, bought Trail's End outright and left a little over for house renovations."

The cold months of winter may test their new-found serenity, but the Nightingales aren't concerned. The house is snug, and as for getting around:

"A country policeman who stopped by to get acquainted one evening told us that if we could drive through country mud in summer we'd have no trouble getting through country snow in winter."

Woman Earns Top Place In Grand Prix Racing

TORONTO (CP) — Grand Prix auto racing has its tightpants brigade which always guarantees full photo exposure, but few women connected with the sport can command the respect given Jean Stanley.

Mrs. Stanley, co-manager of the British-based British Racing Motors racing team, is believed to be the only woman in the world to hold such a position.

"She is a complete member of the team," a BRM executive says of Mrs. Stanley, "with technical knowledge as well as the ability to manage many aspects of the team."

Grand Prix racing goes on in 13 countries and the annual series stretches from March through October. But Mrs. Stanley maintains a calm attitude and band-box neatness despite the rigors of constant travel.

Mrs. Stanley was in Toronto recently with her husband Louis, BRM managing director. With BRM for 15 years, her duties involve great attention to detail with only two or three weeks between races available to prepare and transport cars.

The BRM team has won one world championship and two seconds in the last 10 years and Jean Stanley has contributed more than a fair share to the BRM effort.

"The team faces the coming season with confidence," Mr. Stanley said. "I am extremely lucky to have a wife like Jean."

MPs Blast Banks On Profit Picture

OTTAWA (CP) — A Creditiste call for complete revision of the government's financial policies sparked demands from Liberal MPs in the Commons Tuesday for tighter controls on credit.

Gilbert Rondeau (Creditiste—Shefford) introduced a motion that Parliament give serious consideration to Social Credit monetary proposals.

The Creditiste motion, on which under rules there was no vote, came on the fifth and final special day for debate on opposition motions for the period ending Dec. 10.

It called for distribution of money through a complex system of low-cost credit advances and grants to insure a universal minimum living standard.

John Reid (L—Kenora-Rainy River) said that unless chartered banks and other private lending institutions revise their loan policies, government will have to institute tight controls on credit.

The Commons also passed the government's supplementary spending estimates for the fiscal year ending March 31 totalling $66,446,526. This brought government spending for the year to $11,924,098,029.

Mr. Reid said banks now are making large profits from consumer loans but refusing funds to businesses for expansion and to firms involved in housing construction—"the areas where it's most needed."

E. B. Osler (L—Winnipeg South Centre) called for strict government controls to prevent the banks from "making so damn much money."

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette said the government had been able to finance a war through the central bank—the Bank of Canada—in 1939.

It should be able to eliminate poverty using the same system, he said.

The government was telling school boards to tighten their belts while allowing banks to make ever greater profits.

He said his Creditistes had continuously attacked the paradox between bank earnings and public problems in a period of inflation.

REJECTS THE MOTION

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) rejected the Creditiste motion, saying the grant or "dividend" system the party proposes would be unacceptable in Canada where the government already eats up 37 per cent of the gross national product.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) said that while Creditiste proposals to alleviate poverty are often described as silly, "they're not half as silly as the methods now being used which still leave one quarter of the population is poverty."

Bernard Dumont (Creditiste—Frontenac) said inflation now is worse than the depression of the 1930s. But while the poor were suffering from it, chartered banks were announcing profits of 29 per cent.

Steve Otto (L—York East) said the national dividend proposed by the Creditistes already exists in other forms.

BLAMES ECONOMISTS

Henri Latulippe (Creditiste—Compton) said economists are to blame for many of the current flaws in the monetary system.

Ross Whicher (L—Bruce) said the Creditiste proposal involves the false assumption that printing more money increases the purchasing power of the poor.

Andre Fortin (Creditiste—Lotbiniere) said there is no difference between borrowing abroad—as the government sometimes does—and "creating money" by grants or credit advances as his party proposes.

Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo) said some MPs laugh at the Creditiste proposals but he is impressed with the party's concern for the common people.

Sensational New Hearing Aid Costs Less Than 10 Cents Per Year To Operate

Space age technology has come to the hearing aid industry. A new hearing aid has been developed that actually costs less than ten cents per year to operate. Aid also automatically controls speech interfering noises and can be custom adjusted for correct hearing on the spot. DOUGLAS-HOME
. . . makes suggestion

'Send Navy To Help Biafrans'

LONDON (CP) — Sir Alec Douglas-Home's suggestion of a Biafran food relief program, with Canadians and Americans as possible supervisors if Britons proved unacceptable, has met with a cool reception from Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart.

The British government is today reported fully aware that both Canada and the United States are prepared to make naval units available to an international organization for relief airlifts into Biafra.

The idea proposed by Douglas-Home, Britain's Conservative prime minister in 1963-64, calls for use of British aircraft carriers, other suitable ships and helicopters for relief of the starving in the embattled secessionist area of Nigeria.

Miners' Head Re-Election 'Decisive'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President W. A. (Tony) Boyle of the United Mine Workers, invoking the spirit of the late John L. Lewis, claimed a smashing re-election victory today over Joseph A. Yablonski in the union's greatest internal battle in nearly 50 years.

"The greatest man that ever defended labor in this country, John L. Lewis, my mentor, selected me; he didn't select and train my opponent in the responsibility of running this union," Boyle said in crediting his victory to the loyalty of coal miners to the memory of Lewis.

But Yablonski, a 27-year member of the 200,000-member union's executive board, refused to concede despite Boyle's report that he polled some 73,000 votes to 40,000 for his opponent.

He said from his home in Clarksville, Pa.:

"They can go to hell. I'm conceding to nobody. I'm conceding nothing."

HEAL THE WOUNDS

"I'm not believing everything they are giving out," Yablonski said of the voting returns from locals in Canada and the U.S. compiled and reported from Mine Workers' Washington headquarters.

"Our big job now is to heal the wounds and to bridge the gap that has been created," said the 65-year-old Boyle in a statement claiming victory for a second five-year term in the $50,000-a-year union presidency.

Vets Remember

PEARL HARBOR (AP) — Veterans groups placed wreaths at the gleaming white memorial over the sunken battleship Arizona Sunday, marking the 28th anniversary of the Japanese attack that catapulted the United States into The Second World War. Hundreds of tourists boarded navy boats in bright weather to visit the memorial. Still entombed in the Arizona are 1,100 men, the largest group of men lost in the surprise air attack.

News Control Concentration Hit

OTTAWA (CP) — Two newspapers agree that concentrating different forms of news dissemination in the hands of a single business organization may be dangerous for a community.

However, the Windsor Star and the St. John's Evening Telegram disagree, in testimony prepared for presenation today to a special Senate inquiry into the news business, on the need for a self-disciplinary press council in Canada.

The Windsor, Ont., newspaper says in its prepared brief that "if one owner controls more than one of the four media of communication — news paper, television, radio and cable television—in any given area, it is bad."

The Newfoundland newspaper says concentration of ownership of newspapers, radio and television in one hand may not be a good thing.

However, the Windsor Star favors establishment of councils to "induce a sense of responsibility in newspaper publishers" at local, provincial and national levels, while the St. John's Telegram rejects such an idea.

The opposing views on the necessity of establishing bodies made up of press and public to oversee news presentation reflects testimony presented in the opening session Tuesday to the committee headed by Senator Keith Davey of Toronto, former Liberal party organizer.

WERE ALSO DIVIDED

Both the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association and the Canadian Managing Editors Conference said their members were divided over the idea of a disciplinary press council such as one that exists in Britain.

Also presenting testimony today are The Canadian Press, the national news-gathering organization, and its broadcasting offshoot, Broadcast News Ltd.

The Canadian Press, a co-operative organization of more than 100 Canadian daily newspapers, says its aim is to pool the news-gathering facilities of Canada's English and French newspapers so all papers may have "an accurate, comprehensive and reasonably interpretative news report within their ability to pay."

Broadcast News similarly serves 347 radio and television stations.

The Windsor Star, alone among submissions presented so far, offers succinct answers to a series of 47 questions issued in advance by the Senate committee.

Among other comment on the news business, the Windsor newspaper says:

—Concentration of ownership of news organizations is undesirable socially, but highly likely to continue because death taxes increases pressure to sell to groups. The Windsor Star makes a special plea against death-tax regulations, commenting that pressures have been severe on its own efforts to remain independent since the 1967 deaths within days of owners Richard Graybiel and his father Hugh.

—Press freedom is no more than the freedom of the individual to speak his views freely. It is threatened only on the economic front by concentration of ownership.

—Newspapers are here to stay, despite predictions that electronic systems will replace them.

—Pressure groups are a real problem, but "we cope as best we can" to maintain honesty of a news presentation.

The St. John's Evening Telegram, commenting on press-council discipline, says "the newspapers of Canada are, we believe, very capable of editing themselves."

The view that the press exerts powerful control over government is debatable and the role of the press in the free world is romanticized and greatly exaggerated, says the Newfoundland newspaper.

However, press freedom is threatened more by governments than by mass ownership, it adds.

The Canadian Press and Broadcast News submissions trace the history of their efforts since 1917 and 1953 respectively to provide news services of improving quality to Canadian newspapers and broadcasters.

PUPILS SEE GRIM FACTS OF POLLUTION

VANCOUVER (CP) — The kids put the fish in the water and took it out again 15 seconds later. It was dead.

That's how the 11- and 12-year-olds in West Vancouver school district are being taught the grim facts about pollution.

The lethal water was collected by the youngsters personally, during a field trip from a special outdoor science school set up this year at Langdale, across Howe Sound from West Vancouver.

Sixty Grade 7 students a week are taught at the Langdale school, studying nature —and pollution—first-hand.

As part of their course, they collect water samples and sea life from different areas of the sound and write reports on what they find.

One project undertaken by 11-year-old Janet Brant is a specimen display with written descriptions of what she found at two locations — Roberts Creek, which faces Georgia Strait, and Port Mellon, a pulp mill site on West Howe Sound.

THRIVE IN ONE PLACE

"Roberts Creek is very different than Port Mellon," she writes. "There are crabs, barnacles, seaweed, fish and many other forms of life.

"The air is smelling fresh. The water is clean.

"Port Mellon: At the pulp mill I went looking for insects, plants, crabs, etc.

"We looked in lowest tide and also the highest. We found no crabs like you would at an unpolluted beach.

"We found only a wood bug, a spider, tiny flying bugs and one empty shell filled with burnt sawdust. The sawdust is as deep as three feet.

"There is not enough unpolluted plants, food, etc., for the animals, such as crabs, etc., to eat."

MAKE FIELD TRIPS

The water that killed the fish in 15 seconds came from the Port Mellon area. A similar fish thrived in water from the Roberts Creek area.

The science school at Langdale, conducted out of a Salvation Army camp, is directed by Edwin W. Jackson, a former teacher in West Vancouver. The students, in groups of 60, attend for a week at a time, spending their days on field trips or in a makeshift laboratory and their evenings watching films on nature and conservation.

"The beauty of this scheme is that the children can spend as much as five hours studying one thing," says Mr. Jackson. "There are no bells ringing, no physical education classes' to attend. They are free to study as long as they like.

"And for two-thirds of the students, it is their first camping trip. So it's an education in more ways than one."

City Told Job Hunting Time's Here

Victoria cannot rely on tourist and retirement dollars indefinitely. It's time the city went job hunting.

James McCrossan, president of the recently formed Inter-Victoria Economic Promotion Council told sales and marketing executives Monday night he has some interesting jobs lined up for the hitherto sedentary city.

For example an administration centre for the Pacific Coast's three billion people could be centred here.

As a start the council has applied to the province for backing in Ottawa for three schemes: an International Research Centre, a Pacific Studies and Data Centre and a World College of the Pacific.

"Any one of all three of these proposals, if based here, would act as a magnet drawing other international activities to our region."

As far as the tourist and retirement trade goes, "local personalities who talk as if Victoria faces a rosy future in these fields are perpetrating a grave disservice to the mass of our local people."

He quoted from an economic survey of the area statistics which back his claim. It says 75 per cent of Victoria economy rests on wage and salary earners and that this city is only 33rd in average income levels.

Insurance Scheme In Black

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan government's automobile insurance plan, the only government - owned-and-operated one in Canada, has never lost money since its inception in 1946.

When the plan was passed by the Saskatchewan legislature April 4, 1946, Premier T. C. Douglas of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, the predecessor of the New Democratic Party, explained to the taxpayers what they were getting.

For a $6 premium—$5 on the car registration and $1 on the licence—private drivers received pain, suffering and out-of-pocket expense benefits, disability benefits and payment for death or dismemberment. Commercial users paid more for the same coverage.

A wage earner could get $20 a week while disabled up to a maximum of $3,000 and dismemberment benefits ranged from $250 for loss of a thumb to $2,000 for loss of both hands or feet.

If a motorist was killed, his family could receive up to $5,000, depending on the number of his dependents.

Critics of the plan said it would never work and the province would be pouring money away on a benefit well handled by private industry. They also opposed the plan because it was compulsory for all drivers.

In the first year, there were more than 3,000 traffic accidents and the province paid $297,895 in claims. However, the government insurance office received $849,791 in premiums.

HAD A SURPLUS

The province came out of the first year with more than $500,000 in surplus funds and has been in the black ever since, largely because of a provision Mr. Douglas explained this way:

"The one thing I want to impress upon you is that the government does not stand to make a single dollar out of this scheme. . . .

"If the cost is less, then the money you have contributed will be kept in the fund and will be used to give you more extensive coverage and higher benefits."

Since 1946, there has been a marked rise in the number of accidents and a corresponding rise in the claims paid.

However, the insurance plan is still operating at a profit.

In 1968 there was $23,857,851 paid in premiums and the insurance office paid $33,116,724 in claims, expenses and taxes—leaving a surplus of $157,868.

Government insurance office officials said recently there is about $5,000,000 in surplus funds accumulated since the plan began in 1946.

There have been some changes in the plan since the first $6 premium.

PAY $65 A YEAR

Drivers pay $65 a year for a $35,000 package with $200 deductible for collision and comprehensive claims. Most buy extra insurance from private companies or government insurance offices but the total rates compare favorably with most regions in North America.

Because it is the only plan of its kind in Canada, the Saskatchewan plan has been the target of criticism from private insurane companies.

John E. Lowes of Peterborough, Ont., president of the Ontario Insurance Agents' Federation, was the latest critic when he called the Saskatchewan plan "the cruelest hoax ever perpetrated on a province."

He charged that even with government support and tax exemptions as a Crown corporation, it was running deeper in the hole every year.

Dave Boldt, who has held the highways portfolio in the cabinet of Ross Thatcher since the Liberal government took over from the CCF in 1964, said Mr. Lowes' remarks were insulting and misleading.

He said the government has never supported the insurance fund from the provincial treasury and the insurance office pays its own taxes and grants.

Mr. Boldt said he was convinced the present plan was the best method of dealing with car insurance.

"As a matter of fact the insurance industry was invited to submit a better plan to the govcrnment. The offer found no takers."

Freedom Said Threatened By Hate Law

TORONTO (CP) — Government legislation on hate literature poses a threat to the basic freedom of speech, former prime minister John Diefenbaker said Tuesday at a dinner celebration of the 50th anniversary of the B'nai B'rith in Toronto.

Diefenbaker said he shares in a general revulsion aroused by "vicious attacks being made on Jews and others."

But he said he believes the Criminal Code now contains sections which if enforced would generally meet the problem.

LOT OFFERED FOR SWIM POOL

COWICHAN BAY—A public meeting will be held here Jan. 20 to decide whether residents want to donate $3,000 worth of volunteer labor to get a site for a proposed swimming pool.

Mrs. Eleanor Watson is offering to give the one-acre lot on Wilmot Road to the Cowichan Bay Recreation Commission but with several strings attached.

As well as the improvement work Mrs. Watson wants assurance there will never be any loans registered against the property and a plaque be erected to the memory of her father, Rev. Coverdale Watson, who had the First United Church on the site.

At the January meeting recreation commission officials will discuss whether sufficient funds can be raised to construct a community swimming pool.

Halo in Orbit? Not Likely!

DUNCAN—An unidentified object described as "greyish, saucer-shaped, with a transparent centre" hovered for about three minutes Tuesday over Alexander elementary school, witnesses said today.

Mrs. Edith Bieling, a teachers' aide, said she and two other aides, a teacher and the school secretary watched the aerial phenomenum from inside the school for a few minutes before rushing outside for a better look.

It was sighted at 9:50 a.m.

"We got a good look at it," said Mrs. Bieling, a resident of the area for 19 years.

"It was practically the same color of the clouds which were quite low.

CIRCULAR PLANE?

"But it was definitely not a cloud or any other type of weather disturbance."

She said the object was not an aircraft.

"Have you ever seen a circular aircraft?"

The object was reported to have seemed bigger when observed outside the classroom. It made no noise and appeared to move sideways "but did not wobble" until it suddenly took off upward at great speed and disappeared into the clouds.

All witnesses confirmed the description and said it was the first UFO sighting for them all. Several UFOs have been reported at night over Kuper Island and Ladysmith during past weeks.

This was the first daylight sighting.

Principal of Alexander, Thomas Good, joked that the teaching staff was probably observing "the principal's halo going into orbit."

Clean Bill Given Free School

The Saturna Island Free School, target of health authorities for most of this year, has been cleaned up.

The Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health was told Tuesday that an inspection Nov. 19 showed conditions "were improved sufficiently" to indicate that no further action is needed "if the school continued to be maintained at its present level of cleanliness."

The board was also told, in another matter, that Welfare Minister P. A. Gaglardi is studying the rate structure paid to private hospitals for individuals on welfare.

Two-Month Term For Having LSD

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — Joseph Walter Ryan, 19, was sentenced Tuesday to two months in prison and 18 months probation after his release from prison when he pleaded guilty here to possession of LSD.

Ryan will serve his prison term after completion, in June 1970, of an earlier term imposed for violation of parole.

ACUTE CASES WAITING, SAYS ADMINISTRATOR

Extended Care Patients Plug Hospital

DUNCAN — Extended care patients are taking up beds in the acute care wing and causing delay of admittance of medical cases, Cowichan District Hospital administrator Ken Noton said Tuesday.

Noton told a news conference the situation will deteriorate rather than improve because there are at least 18 extended care patients on the waiting list to be admitted.

About eight medical cases are being deferred because there are no beds available. He said the 17-bed extended care unit in a converted wing is working well but is crowded to capacity.

APRIL VOTE?

Noton said the hospital board hoped a referendum for an extended care unit adjacent to the hospital could be put to a vote in April after the way is cleared by the Regional District Hospital Board and British Columbia Hospital Insurance Service.

Part of the hospital's problems of overcrowding began earlier this year when a decision was made to accept 17 elderly patients from the Mary Moore Salvation Army Hospital at Cobble Hill which ceased operation June 30.

Noton said he hoped Cowichan residents realized the importance of the April referendum.

"Not only will it create space for our extended care patients but it will give us back the acute care beds we so desperately need."

He said sketch plans for the 50-bed extended care unit will be completed in about two weeks. After a meeting with Health Minister Loffmark in June, CDH officials were told they could construct a reinforced concrete building if they could raise the difference between the acceptable cost of reinforced concrete and the acceptable cost of frame construction.

The financing of the additional cost, which has been a source of contention between the board and BCHIS for many months, because the government favors a wooden building, would be the responsibility of the Regional Hospital District.

DRIVER SURVIVES PLUNGE

NANAIMO — A forklift driver escaped drowning Monday when his $17,000 machine plunged into Nanaimo harbor.

Robert Dean, 790 Churchill, was unloading pulp from a barge when a line holding the vessel to the wharf parted.

Assembly wharf dock manager Les Irving lowered himself to the water line and grabbed the driver as he surfaced.

They were pulled out by workers and Dean received treatment for a head wound.

Thieves Leave Restaurant In Shambles

COBBLE HILL — Thieves smashed a double-locked back door to gain entrance to the Good Shepherd Restaruatn early Tuesday and stole about $200 worth of cigarettes, frozen food and meat.

Police said there was no cash on the premises which are owned by the Good Shepherd Shelter Foundation located on the same property on the Trans-Canada Highway near here.

A spokesman for the restaurant, operated under lease by the shelter, said the restaurant was left in a shambles by the theives who were obviously looking for money.

Among the goods taken were a quantity of frozen meat, including some purchased for the Christmas season. No burglary insurance was carried.

Driver Bruised In Truck Crash

DUNCAN — Norm Pombert, 38, of Crofton escaped serious injury Monday when the huge Arrow Transfer chip truck he was driving went out of control and tipped over on the Lake Cowichan highway about nine miles west of here.

Pombert was only bruised in the accident, caused by mechanical failure, which tied up traffic both directions for 1½ hours while crews moved the truck, trailer and mound of wood chips to the side of the road.

WELFARE AID GIVEN 152 IN DUNCAN

DUNCAN — A total of 152 persons benefited from the $10,355 social assistance funds disbursed through the city office during November, city administrator Gordon Berry said today.

Berry said 45 families with 100 dependents were allowed $7,442 of the total amount. Twenty-two single men received $1,467 while 13 single women got $1,178.

Ten transients were given $169 and two boarding home cases received $98.

The city of Duncan disburses between $10,000 and $12,000 a month in social welfare funds supplied through the provincial welfare department.

Mass Slaughter of Innocents Approved by U.S. 'Respectables'

By COLMAN McCARTHY
The Washington Post

One of the ironies of the present outrage at the My Lai murders is that the outrage is directed at the small evil, not the large one.

Go all out, we say, and court-martial the privates and lieutenants who pumped bullets into the non-combatant peasants.

But apparently it is not good form to be outraged at the men in power who got the U.S. into the larger horrors of Vietnam.

Nor should anyone be especially angered at the civil and military officials who, with detachment and often 10,000 miles from the war zones, established the policy of "search and destroy," or the policy of bombing civilian sites, or napalming, or defoliation, or moving refugees like cattle.

'Use great evil to ward off a greater evil'

These latter policies, carefully planned with computers, charts and maps, are the portrait of the larger evil of Vietnam, of which My Lai is only a minor brush stroke.

The moral problem of this killing is that many more than the accused soldiers are involved. Implicated in a deeper way is the society which either actively supported their presence in Vietnam or passively approved of it by their silence.

In a brilliant book, The Respectable Murderers, sociologist Paul Hanly Furfey wrote: "It is an infinitely tragic fact that the greatest crimes of history are committed with the co-operation or at least with the passive consent of the solid citizens who constitute the stable backbone of the community.

"The sporadic crimes that soil the front pages, the daily robberies, assaults, rapes and murders are the work of individuals and small gangs.

"They are committed by manifest criminals whom the community despises and punishes.

"But the great evils, the persecutions, the unjust wars of conquest, the mass slaughters of the innocent, the exploitations of whole social classes—these crimes are committed by the organized community under the leadership of respectable citizens."

History's list of "respectable murders" is long and well-known: Herod and the Holy innocents, Nero and the early Christians, the Crusaders and the "infidels," the Spanish inquisition, the American pioneers who slaughtered Indians, to name a few of the more glamorous.

●

The "murderers" were made respectable not only by themselves, but also by their followers—those who either went out and did their master's killing or those who stayed home and benefited.

What alarms many who oppose the Vietnam war and who march on moratorium days or flee to Canada or Sweden to demonstrate their alarm is the belief that the United States is a "respectable murderer" in Vietnam.

As U.S. involvement became greater in Vietnam, it became clearer that it would be knowingly committing many awful acts and assuming many kinds of guilt.

Even Lyndon Johnson knew this; quoting Thomas Jefferson, Johnson said in his 1967 State of the Union speech that societies are "compelled sometimes to choose a great evil in order to ward off a greater (evil)."

It is wrong to do the great evil of napalming a village to destroy the supposedly greater evil of a few "suspected" Viet Cong; it is wrong to defoliate farmland to keep the VC from perhaps growing food on it; it is wrong to destroy another people's country and culture because perhaps the greater evil of communism may be stopped that way.

●

The great-greater theory of evil means that any leader of any country can come along and say that he must go out and murder the people of another nation because, being a true humanitarian, he is striving to bring about a greater good.

Thus, the Spanish inquisitors tortured and murdered because they were doing the Lord's work of stamping out infidelity.

Nero slaughtered Christians because they were dangerous to the empire. Hitler justified his Jewish murders because the Jews were plotting to take over the world.

Long before Vietnam, Harry Truman justified the bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, insisting that the horror really "saved lives" and "ended the war," even though some post-war surveys suggest that Japan's will had been crushed before August, 1945, by conventional obliteration bombing of civilian cities, such as the residential district of Tokyo in early March, 1945.

Carl Jung, the Swiss psychologist who was concerned about the individual's survival in mass society, wrote about the way we wage war:

"Look at the devilish means of destruction that are invented by perfectly harmless gentlemen, reasonable, respectable citizens, being all we hope to be.

"And when the whole thing blows up and causes an indescribably inferno of devastation, nobody seems to be responsible. It simply occurs, yet it is all man-made."

How does the moral person get away from the madness? He can't, physically.

If he heads for a desert island or the northern woods, he may find a MIRV base already there.

All he can do is to be certain that his own life is free from any form of "respectable murder," and then cast his lot in some effective way with those on whom the bombs fall and the bullets spray.

9 IN MEMORIAM

HARWOOD, Emily V. — In loving memory of a dear wife, mother and grandmother, who was taken from us suddenly on Dec. 10, 1966.

Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear;
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thoughts to reach;
Sweet to remember her who once was here
And who, though absent, is just as dear.

—Sadly missed by her husband, Ernest J., her family and grandchildren.

SHOEMAKER—In loving memory of our Dad and Grandad, Harry Shoemaker, who passed away Dec. 10th, 1968.

We watched you suffer, there was nothing we could do,
You never deserved what you went through,
God took your hands and set you free,
Nobody misses you more than we.

—Ever loved and remembered by Bill, Bae and Bud.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

MOVIE TO WATCH is "The Pit and the Pendulum." (1961). 9, Channel 4. One of the first and probably still the best of the films based on Edgar Allan Poe's tales starring Vincent Price. This thriller has all the stock ingredients of horror yarns including the castle on the hill, a fantastic torture chamber, walled-up coffins, and screams in the night. John Kerr plays the young innocent who comes to Price's Spanish castle to investigate his sister's mysterious death and falls prey to the spooky machinations.

★ ★ ★

PRO HOCKEY. 5, Channel 8, is an all-Canadian affair with The Toronto Maple Leafs tangling with the Montreal Canadiens. Danny Gallivan does the play-by-play and Dick Irvin is the commentator.

NATURE OF THINGS, 7:30, Channel 2, takes a look at research being done into the effects of various drugs on animal behavior and perception. On film; a cat under the influence of marijuana. Included is an interview with Dr. Kalant of Toronto's Alcohol and Drug Addiction Research Foundation.

INTERNATIONAL MAGAZINE. 9, Channel 8, focuses on the Mafia management, a fact of economic life in Sicily, where building contracts for earthquake-destroyed homes were awarded to Mafia-controlled companies; and also on communal living; U.S. influence in Canada; and finally, one West German solution to old age.

★ ★ ★

GLEN CAMPBELL HOUR. 7.30, Channel 7. Before moving to Sunday night on December 21st, Campbell invites "Mayberry's" George Lindsey, Michele Lee, and Rick Nelson on his final Wednesday night. Lindsey retains his country style with small town memories, has a gag about swapping, and learns to dance with Michele Lee. Glen and Michele sing a duet; Rick Nelson tries a Bob Dylan tune; Campbell and banjoist Larry McNeeley play numbers like "Nola;" and Glen's concert spot features "Dang Me" and "Blowin' in the Wind."

ROOM 222. 8:30, Channel 4. "Seventeen, Going on Twenty-Eight." Another valid subject is explored on this consistently fine series about high school teacher-student relationships. Pete Dixon is faced with an awkward and potentially dangerous situation when he discovers that a girl he met and drove home one evening, is actually a senior at Whitman High. The twist here is that the beautiful senior is determined to snare Pete for her very own, and Pete's handling of her is interesting to watch.

MEDICAL CENTRE. 9, Channels 7, 12. A two-hankie show. In for a thyroid examination, a rich widow meets a cute Mexican kid whose mother was killed in a cross-walk accident. The widow is running away from involvement, but Doc Gannon brings the two together hoping for a happy ending. The hour is really for the ladies, combining as it does a reaching-out theme and an orphan boy.

★ ★ ★

MUSIC HALL. 9, Channel 5. Johnny Cash is the performing host of this warm and earthy show, inspired as it is by Carl Sandburg's poetry which reached out to everyone. Tune in for an hour about people as Cash opens with "This Land is Your Land;" continues with the work song, "Going to Memphis;" turns to irony with Peggy Lee's "Is That All There Is?"; and switches back to strength and health with "Try to Remember" from young Browning Bryant.

In an hour full of highlights, listen for a medley of songs of "love and loneliness" from Johnny and Peggy, and their closing spiritual, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot."

NEW FACE on Laugh-In to be introduced Dec. 29 is comedienne Lily Tomlin, shown here making last-minute adjustment before introduction by Dan Rowan.

Fountain To Remain In Dark

Centennial Fountain will remain in the dark until at least January.

Faced with a $12,650 repair bill to fix fountain lights the Victoria parks committee Tuesday decided to toss the final decision into the lap of the incoming council.

The lights went out last winter after one of the conduits carrying power cables sprang a leak and posed a threat to the fountain pool.

Subsequent studies came up with a price of $20,000 to do a first-calss job with complete safety features built in.

That was too rich for the city's blood and design changes were requested to trim the budget back to $12,650.

City manager Dennis Young said the city had $10,000 on hand for the repair job. But treasurer James Bramley came up with a corrected amount of only $4,200 in the fountain fund.

That was when the committee decided to let the new city council find the extra $8,400—or leave the lights out.

Indian Health Paper Goes To Committee

OTTAWA (CP) — A document showing rising death rates among Indians 25 to 29 years of age was referred Tuesday to the Commons standing committee on Indian affairs and northern development.

The committee will be able to call witnesses and make recommendations after studying the document, which was described as "stunning" when brought before the Commons last week by Frank Howard (NDP-Skeena).

Health Minister John Munro said then that the rising death rate among Indians in their late 20s appeared to be the result of suicide and violence rather than disease.

The Commons gave unanimous consent Tuesday to a motion by Government House Leader Donald Macdonald referring the document, entitled Changing Patterns in Indian Mortality, to the committee.

The document was signed by G. Graham Cummings of Ottawa, liaison officer with the medical services branch of the federal health department on behalf of the director-general of medical services in the federal health department.

Student Failure Charges Refuted

Claims that high school dormitory students at Ganges posed disciplinary problems and had a poor record were hotly denied Tuesday by school district chairman George Heineky and James Campbell, B.C. School Trustees' president.

The allegations aere made Monday by Tom Davidson, who defeated Campbell in the Saturna Island school trustee election Saturday.

He said the dormitory problem was the reason for Campbell's defeat.

Campbell asserted that the academic record in the Gulf Islands school was outstanding.

He added that in 1967, 27 students had graduated, 15 in the academic field. Ten went on to post-secondary institutions, mostly universities. Last year there were 29 graduates, 15 in the academic field. Eight went on to post-secondary institutions.

The current year, Campbell said, had seen 21 graduating; 14 in the academic field. Of these, 13 were attending post-secondary institutions.

Three in the latter group were former dormitory students.

"I think that is pretty good. So it is very disturbing to read that a poor academic record has something to do with it."

Questioned about discipline, Campbell said that five students had been dismissed for disciplinary reasons over a period of three years. Some of these, he added, had been re-admitted.

Expressing dismay at Davidson's statements, Campbell said some parents had taken their children away for other reasons "but we have no evidence of what those reasons are."

Davidson claimed that that he had not "been able to pry any information out of the system yet" about children who were taken away by parents.

Discussing his election defeat, Campbell said, "I have to accept the responsibility for not correcting the misconception which obviously exists about the school system. I did not realize it was so far from the truth."

Reduction Of Militia Coming Soon

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's reserve armed forces will be slashed by between 8,225 and 9,400 men in the next few months, it was reliably reported Tuesday.

The reduction could reduce reserves strength to as low as 17,200 men compared with the present 26,600. The new figure might be as high as 18,375.

The difference represents the spread between a 35-and a 40-per-cent cut in the militia, which the reports say will bear almost the entire brunt of the military manpower squeeze.

EXACT SIZE

The exact size of the cuts in percentage terms has not been worked out yet. However, the new force plan is being rapid

THIEVES ALSO TAKE TOP-SECRET ALARM

LONDON (UPI) — Burglars broke into a post office strongroom at the weekend and made off with $110,400 in cash and $1,230,000 worth of insurance stamps.

They also stole the post office's top-secret burglar alarm.

Primate Hits Sainthood Bid

By GODFREY ANDERSON

LONDON (AP) — A question of sainthood brought out this week one of the differences remaining between the Church of England and the Roman Catholic Church in Britain.

John Cardinal Heenan has said he thinks the time is "most opportune" for the canonization of 40 martyrs who died under the direction of English monarchs. Archbishop Michael Ramsey, the Church of England primate, says such a move could harm the ecumenical cause in Britain and speaks of a "siege mentality" in Roman Catholic ranks.

The 40 martyrs, more than half of them priests, met their fate in the reigns of Henry VIII, Elizabeth I and James I soon after the Church of England broke with Rome.

Some were hanged, drawn and quartered—the traitor's death—because they would not recognize the monarch as "supreme head on earth" of the Church of England. Others, including several women, died because they hid fugitive priests in their homes.

The cause of the martyrs was first raised in 1874 by Henry Cardinal Mannin. In 1886, Pope Leo XIII beatified 20 of the 40, thus permitting their veneration.

Two of the most famous—Sir Thomas More and Sir John Fisher—were canonized and added to the church calendar of saints in 1935. Both died in 1535.

Fisher, cardinal and bishop of Rochester, was beheaded on Tower Hill. More, once Henry VIII's lord chancellor, had his head struck off and affixed to London Bridge.

A new list of 40 remaining martyrs was drawn up by England's Roman Catholic bishops in 1962. It included some, such as Jesuit Edmund Campion, who were beatified in 1886. A cause was presented to the Congregation of Rites for their possible canonization.

While in Rome for the recent synod meeting, Cardinal Heenan told the Pope: "It would hearten the Catholics of England to see these champions of the Pope's authority raised to the altars."

Archbishop Ramsey has not commented on this but has referred inquirers to a memorandum he drew up three years ago. His opinion was sought then by the Vice-Postulation for the Cause of the Forty Martyrs, which operates from England's Jesuit headquarters in Mayfair, London.

The memorandum was not published at the time, but the archbishop's opposition is clear from extracts just printed in the Roman Catholic weekly review The Tablet.

"In England our history creates inevitable difficulties," the archbishop's memorandum says in expressing fears that the action in Rome "would encourage those emotions which militate against the ecumenical cause."

OUTLINES PROBLEMS

"There is not only the prejudice of ultra-Protestant people," he points out, "but there is also the 'siege mentality' which is apt to possess Roman Catholics in England."

"By 'siege mentality,' I mean a kind of polemical self-consciousness which is far different from the spirit of the meeting between His Holiness the Pope and myself in March, 1966.

"The 'siege mentality' is, I believe, bound up psychologically with a kind of martyrdom complex deeply, and of course, intelligibly, rooted in history. Ought we not on both sides to be getting away from this?"

Dr. Ramsey suggested that "while some ecumenical language is used, the final outcome is that the martyrs are to be invoked so that through the aid of their prayers non-Roman Catholic Christians in England may be brought within the Roman obedience."

Cardinal Heenan had no comment but Rev. Clement Tigar, a Jesuit who runs the campaign for canonization of the martyrs, insisted: "This is not an aggressive move. We're not condemning anyone. We are holding up as examples men who died for their conscience, who put God before the state. We are not attacking other religions, and certainly not the Church of England."

Dahomey Coup

LOME, Togo (Reuters) — A military coup d'etat today toppled the Dahomey government of Emile Derlin Zinsou, well-informed sources said here.

Telephone communications with Cotonou were cut this morning, and no other details were immediately available.

Togo and Dahomey are neighboring West African coastal states.

Zinsou was appointed president by a military government in June, 1968, and a month later announced Dahomey's first civilian government for 2½ years.

The military government which appointed Zinsou had taken over from President Christophe Soglo after a year of deepening economic difficulties. The military rulers decided Zinsou should run the country for at least five years.

Dahomey, stretching back from the coast like a thin finger into central Africa, is bordered on the east by Nigeria and on the west by Togo.

The country became independent from France in August, 1960, covers an area of 47,092 square miles and has a population of 2,400,000.

Brazil Orders Torture Probe

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Charges of the physical and psychological torture of political prisoners and common criminals alike have spurred a government investigation into Brazil's security forces.

Reports of prisoners being beaten and subjected to other tortures have been trickling out of army and police installations for weeks.

A Brazilian magazine and a group representing two jailed lawyers have levelled charges of brutality against police squads.

President Emilio Garrastazu Medici, whose government enjoys only limited popularity, has ordered his security forces "to immediately review their repressive schemes."

But Brazilian authorities also have imposed censorship on news reports of alleged tortures.

Federal police and military authorities in Rio de Janeiro, Sao Paulo and other large cities warned newspapers and radio and television stations to tone down or eliminate stories on the subject.

Veja, a weekly news magazine, recently charged political police squads with subjecting political prisoners to electrical shocks, beatings, hunger and simulated executions before a firing squad. The magazine said the prisoners were confined in small, damp cells resembling coffins.

Justice Minister Alfredo Buzaid was quoted as saying he would launch "an inflexible investigation of responsibilities" as soon as he received a document from the Brazilian Order of Lawyers, which charged two lawyers in Brasilia were beaten by political police agents seeking to extract confessions.

Buzaid told reporters last week he "knew of no cases of torture."

Leopoldo Heitor, a Sao Paulo lawyer who was held without charges for two weeks by the Sao Paulo political police, had written a letter to Buzaid detailing some of the torments he witnessed.

He said he saw priests, arrested in connection with charges of harboring alleged terrorists, "hung from their feet, absorbing shocks and beatings." He added that he saw a student walking by his own means into the police installation and leaving the first interrogation "carried by others, his hands and feet looking like the stump of a mortar, swollen all over."

Gen. Viana Moog, head of the Sao Paulo security police, has rejected charges that his men resort to tortures in the course of investigations.

Like other lawyers, Heitor criticized regulations that allow authorities to keep political suspects incommunicado for 10 days.

However, lawyers have charged some prisoners are kept isolated for two or more weeks.

HOME GARDEN

Flowers for Christmas Table

BY HILDA BEASTALL

Living flowers fresh from your garden to the Christmas table are a dream come true when you live in this part of B.C. Most seasonal are the Christmas-roses, Helleborus niger, with pure white saucer-shaped blossoms opening from fat buds in succession from October to March. Since the stems are only five or six inches long, we sometimes find the blooms splashed with soil but this is easily prevented by spreading living green moss beneath them, or even placing a few flat stones around the plants.

Hilda

Experiment a few days ahead of needing the flowers. Pick some blossoms, at different stages of development. Split the bottom inch of each stem with knife or scissors, and put at once into deep, warm (but not hot) water right up to the blossoms.

Leave them in the water for 12 hours or more in a cool spot.

During this time note which flowers appear to respond best — the partially-opened ones or the fully-opened when picked. Results also vary a bit according to conditions in growing, and in the home.

Repeat the process, using more flowers. If any flower shows signs of wilting, remove it, make a fresh cut, resplit the stem and replace it in the deep water. It will probably recover.

Hellebore blossoms will last for more than a week at their best. H. niger has no leaves on the flower stems, so use the foliage of another kind of plant as background. A few dark green leaves of a rhododendron, or a graceful branch from the blue spruce; suit yourself, but keep the table decoration down to no more than four or five inches for finest effect on a Christmas table.

If your garden is producing real roses, bush roses, on the shrubs which gave you so much bloom in summer, you may want to use these for a Christmas table decoration.

Early in the day they are wanted, cut the best of the flowers, half-open and freshly opened, with short stems and some unblemished leaves. Crush bottom inch of stems and place at once in water up to the blooms. If outer petals are browned, remove them carefully without loosening the remaining.

At the latest convenient moment before the meal, take them from the water, drain well on towelling and lay them in an oval garland on the cloth around a trio of lighted candles. If desired, lay waxed or colored foil paper over the cloth for protection.

Another way to enjoy these lovely and sometimes fragrant winter roses indoors is in a shallow pastel-colored bowl. Set two or three small pinholders firmly, and group the various colors of the roses with their own foliage. The shorter the stems the better the roses will last when cut.

Multiple Sclerosis Patients Given Hope

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

I was just reading an excellent article on multiple sclerosis by Dr. Joe R. Brown of the Mayo Clinic. In this disease, the main cause of trouble is a loss of insulation around various nerves (as if a rat had chewed through the protective, outer layer of an electric cord, exposing the wires inside). This causes symptoms of nerve weaknesses in many places in the body, often starting around the age of 20 in the eyes and coming and going, usually for many years.

As Dr. Brown says, "The course of multiple sclerosis in any one person is likely to be a mixture of acute flare-ups with remissions, periods of slow progression, and periods of stability when the disease does not advance." Now neurologists are recognizing that in many persons the disease can run a benign or mild course.

Dr. Brown tells of a book on multiple sclerosis in which the authors report a study of 572 veterans of the Second World War who had their first attack of multiple sclerosis, or what looked like it, while they were in the service. After some 20 years, about one-sixth of these men had no further evidence of the disease. In 1951, a study made of the many patients with multiple sclerosis in Rochester, Minn. showed that only one in 25 had become disabled, either for working or walking.

★ ★ ★

Also encouraging was the fact that the survivorship 20 years after the onset of the disease was 80 per cent of the normal or expected survivorship, such as one finds in the average person. Among the survivors, 85 per cent were up and about 10 years after onset of the disease. That certainly is hopeful.

After a flare-up of the disease, there is a strong tendency for spontaneous improvement, and there may or may not be some residual disability. One reason why it will be hard to be sure that a cure has been found for multiple sclerosis is that so many people get better without medicine.

In a recent study, 65 patients who were having acute flare-ups of multiple sclerosis were put in a hospital for two weeks and given only a placebo (sugar pill). At the end of four weeks there was clinical improvement in 2 of 3, and there was no progression of the disease in 1 in 5.

Recent studies show that the average severity, or disability from mulitple sclerosis should permit the patient to go on with his or her employment or homemaking. In one study, 74 per cent of the patients were found walking around 20 years after the onset. As Dr. Brown says, there is no specific treatment known as yet, and we still do not know the cause of the disease. However, some recent studies give hope that knowledge will soon come.

We have 3445 for the game today. Using all four digits each time — one 3, two 4's, one 5 — you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation (that's not the simple plus) or factorial symbols. Don't forget powers (no extra digits) the root sign, and decimals.

For example, 54 plus 3 plus 4 is a solution for 61.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 98. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send free hints to help in future games if requested.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Dumont Introduced Novel Army Tactics

By BOB BOWMAN

Pierre LeMoyne d'Iberville was probably the greatest Canadian military leader of all time. It is said that if his exploits between 1686 and 1706 had taken place in Europe instead of the wilds of North America, he would be recognized as having been as great as Napoleon.

Another remarkable Canadian was Gabriel Dumont who was Louis Riel's military leader in the 1885 rebellion. Dumont with 500 men, many of them poorly-armed, held up General Middleton's Army of 2,000 well-armed men for weeks before he was defeated. He wasn't ready to admit defeat even then, but Riel threw in the sponge. In the last days of the fighting Dumont's men were firing small stones from heir guns as they had run out of bullets.

Dumont was successful as a military leader because he had been brought up in the well-organized buffalo hunts on the prairies. When Middleton was marching his troops from Qu'Appelle (the end of the railway line) to Batoche Dumont had spies acting as wagon-drivers and he knew every step of their progress. He prepared an ambush at Fish Creek with 130 men hidden in the banks so Middleton's soldiers were silhouetted against the sky. Then with only 20 men to help him, he planned to attack the army from the rear and drive the soldiers into a buffalo pound. Unfortunately the element of surprise was lost because some of the Metis left a campfire burning.

Dumont tried all kinds of tricks. He lit grass fires that would act as smoke screens and then had his men attack through them firing, then getting back for cover.

Even as a young man Dumont proved that he was a leader. He was the man they sent out when no one else could get a buffalo. He could call them as a hunter calls a moose. When he was only 10 years old he could put a bullet through the head of a duck 100 yards away, and he was almost as good with a bow and arrow. Like Jerry Potts he knew the prairies like the back of his hand and how to overcome their dangers. Indians and fur traders would get him to tell them when it was noon. Dumont would face the sun and when could step the length of his shadow it was 12 o'clock.

Gabriel Dumont was elected President of the Provisional Government at Batoche on December 10, 1873. If he had an army of 2,000 well-armed men Middleton never would have defeated him.

Other events on December 10:

1755—Two ships carrying deported Acadians sank at sea with loss of 1,200 lives.

1813—U.S. General McLure sacked Newark, Niagara peninsula.

1830—Robert Baldwin urged that proceeds of clergy reserves should be allocated to education.

1880—House of Commons began considering C.P.R. bill.

1894—Failure of British company caused financial crisis in Newfoundland.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

On many deals, there is no sure way of playing a hand to guarantee the making of a contract. But, in virtually every deal, there is a superior line of play, and one or more inferior ones. The deal presented today, which arose in a recent rubber-bridge game, illustrated this theme.

Both sides vulnerable South deals.

♡ A K 9 2
◇ A J 10
♣ 6 4 3

◇ 8 4

SOUTH
♠ 9 4
♡ Q 10
◇ K Q 9 7 3
♣ A K 7 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	4 ◇	Pass
5 ◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

West led the king and ace of spades, and then continued with the queen, which South ruffed. Declarer cashed the king and ace of trumps, noting East's play of the eight-spot on the second trump lead. He now reflected before making his next play.

It was rather obvious that to fulfill his contract, South had to bring home four heart tricks (so that he could discard his two losing clubs). To play the queen and king of hearts, hoping that one of the defenders had been dealt the doubleton J-x, figured to be a losing play. But if declarer finessed against the defenders' heart jack successfully, he would make four heart tricks. The question was whether to finesse against East or West?

West's spade overcall, combined with the fall of East's spade jack on the third lead of that suit, indicated that West had held five spades originally. And East's play of the trump eight on the second trump lead pointed to East as having no more trumps. Hence, West had started with three trumps originally.

Thus, eight of West's cards were known: five spades and three trumps. Five of East's cards were known: three spades and two trumps. So East had eight unknown cards; West had five unknown cards. On probability, the heart jack figured to be in East's hand, rather than West's.

So, at trick six, a low heart was led off dummy, declarer finessing his 10-spot successfully. The heart queen was then cashed, after which dummy was entered via the trump jack. On the ace and king of hearts, South discarded his two losing clubs.

Mary Wore a Flaming Purple Theatre Coat

TORONTO (CP) — The Virgin Mary, played by soprano Cecile Landerville of Hull, Que., wore a flaming purple theatre coat with ruffles around the throat and down the front.

Elizabeth, John the Baptist's mother, was sung by Toronto soprano Donna Small-Howard in a halo of red ringlets, glasses and a green spangled evening gown.

Malcolm Russell of Toronto wore a tuxedo for the dual role of Joseph and the angel Gabriel.

The stage was Yorkminster Park Baptist Church and the occasion the first public performance of two acts of the four-act religious opera, The Birth of Our Lord.

About 500 persons attended the 2¾-hour production, made available mainly through the efforts of former transport minister Paul Hellyer.

Hellyer, Liberal member of Parliament for Trinity, and his wife Ellen were in attendance to see the result of 10 years of financial contributions to his friend, Rev. Arthur Poynter, writer of the opera.

None of the nine compositions under Hellyer's subsidy had ever been performed until this week.

Written around the birth of Christ, the opera was originally to be performed on a stage with a cast of hundreds. Because of the high production cost, Saturday's $2,000 production was limited to a concert performance from the red-carpeted chancel of the church.

Hellyer explained that his patronage began 10 years ago when, shortly after learning of Poynter's long-thwarted desire to compose, he was to sing in the minister's choral presentation of an oratorio at Eaton Auditorium.

Instead he dropped out to run and win in the 1958 byelection and ended up financing most of the oratorio's $10,000 expense.

Lessening of Tension Between Iran, Iraq

By RALPH JOSEPH

TEHRAN (CP) — Efforts by Jordan to mediate between Iran and Iraq on the Shatt el Arab dispute have resulted in a visible lessening of tension between the two countries. Public recriminations between them, at least, have ceased.

But Iran is taking no chances and is continuing a program of strengthening her armed forces. A bill was passed recently by the Majlis (parliament) authorizing the government to raise $400,000,000 in loans to boost the country's defences.

(At about the same time Robert S. McNamara, head of the World Bank, on a four-day visit here confirmed that the bank was offering Iran "development loans" of more than $400,000,000, but the figure is believed to be a coincidence.)

The new bill is in addition to the special defence credits bill passed by the Senate last March, authorizing some $250,000,000 to be allocated as a supplementary budget for the purchase of new arms, bringing to a total of $650,000,000 the amount allocated to arms purchases this year.

This follows the recently set trend of increased defence purchases: $500,000,000 last year, compared with $270,000,000 in 1967 and $133,000,000 in the 1966 budget.

HOLDS TREATY VOID

The Shatt el Arab is a Persian Gulf waterway, control of which is disputed by Iran and Iraq. Under a treaty Britain made with Iran in 1937, most of the Shatt was awarded to Iraq, the frontier line following the low-water mark on the Iran side in several places.

In 1965 Iran declared the treaty null and void, maintaining it discriminated in favor of Iraq.

The increased defence purchases are an indication of Iran's seriousness about maintaining her position as the strongest Persian Gulf power after Britain withdraws from the area in 1971. But there have been no official disclosures as to how the new amounts are to be spent.

Under previous agreements Iran was to have purchased four British destroyers, two squadrons of F-4 Phantom jet fighters and $110,000,000 worth of unspecified Soviet arms and military equipment, believed to be mainly transport vehicles, aircraft and artillery.

Two of the British destroyers were launched last spring. Of a total of "32 to 50" Phantoms to be delivered, four were displayed over Tehran in the autumn of 1968 and the remainder were reported to be due for delivery gradually over a period of 18 months—that is, by about the spring of 1970, a year ahead of Britain's withdrawal deadline.

THREAT IS CHANGED

Iran first began to bolster her forces—after the British withdrawal plans were announced—as a precaution against Egypt's President Nasser whose forces were then fighting in Yemen. The Persian Gulf is just around the peninsula. Following Nasser's defeat in the 1967 six-day war, however, Iraq would appear to be offering a more immediate threat.

It is always in the interest of unstable Iraqi regimes to keep their army well away from the capital—a necessary precaution against ambitious officers prone to staging lightning coups. This explains in part why Iraq keeps her forces engaged almost continuously in the Kurdish war, without actually winning it. The Kurds are poorly armed and badly trained, if trained at all. It also explains why she is always so anxious to send Iraqi troops to the Israeli front in Jordan, without really engaging the Israelis.

Opening yet another front on the Iranian border near the Gulf may simply be part of the same political strategy.

Iran, however, cannot be expected to look at it in an all-so-innocuous light. Iraq has given refuge to one of Iran's most wanted men, Lt.-Gen. Teymur Bakhtiar, a former intelligence chief, who has been allowed to make propaganda broadcasts against the Iranian monarchy from Baghdad radio. Iranian fears seem to be that Bakhtiar may be using Baghdad as a base for something more serious than propaganda broadcasts. If Bakhtiar forms a rallying point for dissident left-wing Iranians outside the country, backed by the Baghdad Baathists he could prove a considerable irritation to Tehran.

TRAINING INCREASED

It is not insignificant that besides strengthening her naval and air forces Iran has also been giving anti-guerrilla training to units of her 200,000-strong land forces.

This is not to say that Iran has neglected the diplomatic approach to better relations with her Arab neighbors. Her readiness to allow Jordan to mediate between herself and Iraq was preceded in midsummer this year by attempts to improve her relations with the United Arab Republic.

Relations were broken off in 1960 when the Egyptians mounted a propaganda campaign against Iran. The Shah then imposed a precondition to restoration of relations, demanding that the UAR should first apologize for its hostile attitude. But in June this year it was disclosed that this precondition had been lifted as a prelude to restoring relations, and there were reports that the Turks would mediate between the two.

PRESS BARRED FROM MEETINGS

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The federal government and premiers of the ten provinces of Canada today scheduled two more meetings on issues of joint concern.

● Beginning Feb. 16 a session on taxes, economic matters and pollution will open in Ottawa. These issues are to be discussed at the request of the western premiers. The session is to be closed to the press.

● In June constitutional talks will be resumed. They also will be closed to the press.

THATCHER ON TALKS:

'An Exercise In Futility'

OTTAWA (CP)—Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan described the federal-provincial constitutional conference today as "an exercise in futility" he can well do without. "I don't want to come to another of these for a long, long time," he said.

"What are we all doing discussing the constitution? That's not the issue. Economic problems are the issue."

Other westerners at the conference said they agreed there had been little or no progress on constitutional matters. They too felt, in Mr. Thatcher's words, that: "We should get down to bread-and-butter matters."

Prime Minister Trudeau announced the heads of government will meet Feb. 16 to discuss non-constitutional matters, including inflation and pollution.

"Fine," said Mr. Thatcher.

However, he said, Western legislatures will all be sitting at that time and this could cause problems. In addition, the scheduled meeting is only for one day.

CONSIDERED SERIOUS

Mr. Thatcher said he wanted Mr. Trudeau "to wait until April, after the sessions are over, but he feels these things are so serious we should get together."

By that time John Young head of the federal prices and incomes commission, "will have made his report and we may find that the methods we are using to fight inflation are not enough."

"If they are not working we will have to find new weapons and provincial consent may be needed. . . . I think that's why the meeting has been called so early."

Premier Harry Strom of Alberta said of the conference:

"This was the least progress of all the conferences I've been to and I've been to three. . . . It was just a rehash of positions."

He also said economic matters demand priority and expressed a common Western stand if the constitution is to be discussed, the formula for amendment should be settled before the amendments are discussed.

Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba spoke more conservatively than his Western colleagues. Still, he said the conference was little more than a "teach-in."

SHOULD BE CLOSED

If progress is to be made, he said, the conferences should be closed to press, radio and television. In addition, meetings should be held every six months or so.

Mr. Thatcher agreed that conferences should be closed, partly to eliminate speeches directed at TV audiences and partly to give premiers room to manoeuvre.

How can Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand of Quebec "or anybody else who faces an election be really frank with the others in front of those cameras?"

Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia disagreed. The conferences should remain open "so that Canadians know what their governments are talking about."

PROGRESS SLOW

Mr. Bennett also said there hadn't been much progress. But he noted constitutional change is bound to be a slow business; how slow he would not estimate.

Mr. Bennett's attorney-general, Leslie Peterson, said inflation should be tackled immediately. The constitution could come later.

Mr. Thatcher qualified his remark about not wanting to come to another conference by saying he meant another conference like the one that ended today.

Flat-Rate Basis Across Province

By BRUCE YEMEN

B.C. drivers are being told to expect a car insurance rate increase of $22 next year as a result of the compulsory liability coverage brought in by the provincial government.

That increase will be separate from any other rate jumps brought on by rising costs across the country. A rise of six per cent was predicted last week by Toronto insurance officials.

The cost of the compulsory B.C. insurance is being assessed on a flat-rate basis across the province.

An advertising campaign to acquaint insurance agents and members of the public with the impact of the sew scheme is expected to begin shortly.

● ● ●

Radio commercials placed on behalf of the Insurance Bureau of Canada have set the increased costs at six cents a day or $21.90 a year.

This will cover inclusion of $50,000 in third-party liability insurance for injury or death and damage to property.

Failure to carry such insurance after Jan. 1 will cost drivers a fine of not less than $250.

A local insurance agent said today that no information about details of the new scheme has been provided yet.

The new system is based on the no-fault principle and provides compensation for injuries or death and property damage up to the $50,000 limit.

Larger coverage can be purchased at a cost which has not yet been disclosed.

Drivers with policies in force will be automatically covered under the new system until they renew their coverage in 1970.

● ● ●

The new scheme was introduced at the last session of the legislature with Attorney-General Leslie Peterson suggesting premium reductions of up to 25 per cent could result for some drivers.

Opposition critics at the time expressed doubt about that possibility and charged Peterson with deliberately neglecting to figure in the cost of collision coverage.

Collision coverage can still be purchased as before over and above the basic coverage.

Peterson hailed the no-fault coverage as giving the wides, most generous protection to accident victims that is available anywhere in Canada.

Motorcycle Gang Members Get Paddle, Prison Terms

CAMPBELL RIVER — Two members of a motorcycle gang were sentenced to three strokes each of the paddle, a rarely-used punishment.

Alfred Ronald (Bubsie) Worthington, 20, was sentenced to 2½ years in the penitentiary and Terry Vernon Scott, 25, was given a three-year term in addition to the paddling after they were found guilty of robbery with violence.

★ ★ ★

Francis Vivian (Frank) Shaw, 19, was given an 18-month definite and two-year indeterminate sentence at Oakalla prison after being convicted of theft related to the same incident.

"Oh no," sobbed Mrs. Matt Worthington, her head falling forward on her knees, as the judge sentenced her son. Girls in the courtroom sobbed and a defence attorney hurried from the room as judgment was passed.

Worthington's lawyer, Victor Stephen of Courtenay, knocked over papers and furniture in his rush from the court. He told a reporter later he was so furious at the severity of the sentences he fled the room to avoid losing his temper.

Scott and Shaw are from Ontario and Worthington lives in Campbell River.

Michael Bailey, 18, of West Vancouver, who is employed as a cook in Gold River, laid the charges after being beaten and robbed of $124 in his Campbell River hotel room Oct. 9.

Paddle Preferable To Lash

By DON VIPOND

The paddle as punishment for crime is rarely used but, for the liberals who shudder, the Criminal Code actually specifies whipping with the cat-o' nine tails.

Whipping could be part of a court sentence after conviction for a variety of offences, including rape, armed burglary, choking, drugging, robbery and indecent assault, city prosecutor Cory Stolte said today.

The Code says a court may sentence a convicted person to be whipped up to three times. Females are exempted.

In practice the lash has been retired for some time and the paddle substituted, a veteran police officer explained.

WITH HOLES

The paddle is made of leather with holes drilled in it.

The paddle is administered in a prison and in the presence of a doctor.

The officer described the procedure this way:

The offender is brought blindfolded into a special room where his trousers are lowered and he is strapped to a table.

FIRST STROKE

A guard delivers the specified number of strokes. The holes in the leather have the effect of producing "tremendous welts," with the first stroke. These welts burst and bleed with subsequent strokes.

"I've seen real hard-case criminals who say it's nothing but they don't sit down for a week.

"And I've seen where 10 strokes have been ordered but only five given and the other five held in abeyance, to be cancelled for good behavior. The man always turns immediately into a model prisoner."

He said he believes the paddle has not been ordered in a B.C. court for the past seven or eight years.

B.C. Joins Others In Condemning Talks

By JOHN MIKA

OTTAWA — A British Columbia delegate today fully agreed with Saskatchewan Premier Thatcher's stand that talking about constitutional matters is an unnecessary waste of time.

"That's exactly my feelings," said Industrial Development, Trade and Commerce Minister Waldo Skillings in a telephone interview.

"As far as I'm concerned the whole trouble with the federal government delegation is that they're lawyers.

"We'd get more done with more businessmen at these talks—like Premier Bennett and Premier Thatcher who get right down to the nitty-gritty, the real problems."

"We've had a constitution for the last 100 or 102 years and it's worked damn well.

TOO BRITISH

"The whole trouble is that I think the French people don't like BNA because it stands for British North America and I think personally they want a new constitution and new name for it to eliminate British connections."

Skillings said problems such as freight rates and overseas market difficulties should be discussed instead at major meetings of the federal and provincial governments.

He said the conference just ended accomplished little because it was open and tempted some of the participants to pump parochial politics.

GREAT MISTAKE

"Personally I think it's a great mistake to have public issues of such tremendous importance discussed in the open with television cameras and reporters present for the simple reason too many make political speeches.

"For example, take Ross Thatcher, I though he made some of the finest statements at the conference but they're talking about the next election to their people, on the television and other sessions.

"It was the same way with Premier Bertrand (of Quebec) and the new prime minister of Manitoba, all he was doing was trying to make an impact back on the prairies.

"The idea of these conferences should be to get together and solve problems but they become part of the problem as soon as they get here."

$5 Million Freighter Abandoned on Rocks

Salvage officials abandoned any hope of saving the 628-foot Greek freighter Treis Ierarchai at 10 a.m. today, adding her to the roll of ships claimed by the "graveyard of the Pacific."

The 16,000-ton, $5 million bulk carrier remained precariously lodged on jagged rocks at Ferrer Point, 70 miles north of Tofino.

Bruce McKay, dispatcher for Vancouver Tug and Barge Co. Ltd., who have had two tugs standing by, said:

"The situation is hopeless. It looks as if her back is broken. She's settled by the stern, her afterdecks are awash and the ship is split open at No. 3 hold from deck to bottom. All seven holds are flooded, as well as the engine room."

He added that rising southeasterly winds were expected to reach gale strength.

The captain and 28-man crew will be taken by special bus from Gold River to Vancouver Thursday morning.

BRITISH POLICIES ON NIGERIA SURVIVE

LONDON (AP) — Parliamentary efforts to change the Labor government's policy over the Nigerian civil war fizzled out in The Commons Tuesday night when a widely-heralded voting revolt exploded with a mild pop.

Prime Minister Wilson's government, long under fire for supplying arms to federal Nigeria in its war against the Biafran secessionists, easily won the poll of legislators by 254 votes to 84. The opposition Conservative party's official line was to abstain.

DEMONSTRATION EXPECTED THURSDAY

'Something' Cooking at Buildings

Members of the B.C. Government Employees Union have "something" planned here for noon Thursday in their effort to win collective bargaining rights from the provincial government.

•

John L. Fryer, union general secretary, declined to say whether it would be a little or a big something but said it would take place "weather permitting."

A demonstration at the Legislative Buildings is believed to be planned.

Fryer said the point of the demonstration could be lost if it were revealed in advance.

He was interviewed following a lengthy session with the provincial civil service commission in which the 13,000-member union put forward its salary proposals for 1970.

The commission will prepare studies of its own to compare with the union's proposals which seek average wage increases of 12 per cent, with up to 17 per cent for clerks.

Another meeting will be held in six weeks.

If Premier Bennett follows tradition he will announce the increase in funds available for civil service pay at a luncheon Monday at which long-service employees of the government will be honored.

•

Fryer said the issue of collective bargaining rights was not discussed with the commission because it is a cabinet matter.

A letter from the office of Provincial Secretary Wesley Black has told the union its request for a meeting with the government will be dealt with by the cabinet.

Fryer said it would have been "inappropriate" for the union delegation to attempt to see Black Tuesday without an invitation.

He said a major campaign is being mounted for bargaining rights and it will probably reach a peak early in the new year — about the same time as the campaign for salary increases hits its peak.

But at the moment, he added, the issue is whether the government will sit down with the union and talk.

CHRISTMAS MAIL already is piling up in the temporary post office set up in the Bay Street Armory to handle what will become a flood in the next couple of weeks. Some 500 part-time helpers have been hired to help sort incoming and outgoing mail. The post office says Saturday is deadline for mail destined for Central Canada and next Wednesday the deadline for local mail.

$45 Million Hospital Vote Set for Spring

By JIM HUME

Property owners in the regional district will vote on a $45 million-$50 million acute care hospital referendum this spring.

Of that total $1.8 million will be earmarked, if the referendum is approved, to purchase the St. Ann's Academy property to make way for expansion of St. Joseph's Hospital.

APPRAISED

The Sisters of St. Ann have informed the board that appraised value of the property has been set at $1,587,000.

This morning, along with publication of major plans for hospital development, the Capital Regional District Hospital Board agreed to open negotiations for the property.

The final sale, and the plans for acute-care bed construction, hinge entirely on a "yes" vote when property owners throughout the region go to the polls, probably next March.

At a special meeting of the district board this morning members were told St. Joseph's would be built up to a 640-bed hospital while Jubilee over the next five to seven years would reach a 660-bed capacity.

$18.7 MILLION

Estimated cost to bring St. Joseph's up to maximum capacity has been estimated at $18.7 million.

Jubilee, with no detailed projections of cost yet prepared, is expected to cost between $20 and $25 million.

Following the meeting board officials said with Rest Haven replacement and other costs added the referendum would bring the total close to $50 million.

Excluded from the referendum will be proposals for a 200-bed acute-care facility in the vicinity of McKenzie Avenue.

CEILING

Mayor Ray Bryant of Esquimalt said when St. Joseph's and Jubilee were raised to their 640 and 660-bed marks they would have reached a ceiling beyond which expansion would not go.

"What we are doing here is put a ceiling on development on the major hospitals in Victoria," he said. "Once these sizes are reached any other hospitals built must be elsewhere."

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis asked whether it was to be presumed that the hospital's executive committee's recommendations "would indicate no major action on the third

Academy Site Tag $1.5M

hospital site until this program is completed?"

"That is so," answered the chairman, Mayor Hugh Stephen.

Stephen said later that if the referendum is approved he estimated it would take between five and seven years to complete the major programs at St. Joseph's, Jubilee and Rest Haven.

Rest Haven is scheduled to become a 75-bed acute-care, 75-bed extended-care hospital.

Saanich Ald. Edith Gunning expressed a feeling of relief that a ceiling had been placed on the expansion of the two major hospitals.

"Many have felt that Jubilee and St. Joseph's would just expand and expand," she said. "But this proposal is clear cut."

After the proposals were endorsed by the full board, Stephen asked for a formal motion to pay tribute to the Sisters of St. Ann.

"BEYOND WORDS"

"For 100 years they have cared for the sick and needy in this area," he said. "They have deeded and given as a gift to the people the existing hospital. Their love, care and affection is beyond words.

"We could go into the discussion as to how much public money has gone into the hospital, but the fact remains that the hospital belonged to the sisters and they have deeded it to the public."

The board unanimously approved the resolution of appreciation for past services and the gift of the existing facilities.

Saanich Chief Shocked by Report 3,210 Students Have Smoked Pot

A police chief said today he was shocked by figures in a survey of drug use by Greater Victoria secondary students.

And an RCMP officer said the seven-month-old survey does not take into account shifts in availability of various drugs.

Chief W. A. Pearson of the Saanich Police said it is "absolutely shocking" that 22.3 per cent of 1,002 students surveyed said they had smoked or are still smoking marijuana.

"That means out of 14,795 pupils 3,210 have used it and 1,751 kids could be considered regular users."

Chief Pearson insisted marijuana smoking could lead to use of stronger addictive drugs.

Cpl. Dan Creally, director of the RCMP drug squad for Victoria, said since the survey was taken last April hashish has replaced marijuana as the major drug.

"That's the main thing that's indicative of the change in the past year — hash seems to have taken over from marijuana."

Both policeman praised the survey which was released Tuesday at a press conference at the Greater Victoria school board headquarters.

John Russell, a research associate at the Narcotic Addiction Foundation in Vancouver, and the man who directed the survey, said while there may have been a change of emphasis in the kind of drugs used by young people, incidence has not necessarily risen.

STRONGER

No distinction was made in the survey between marijuana and its resinous derivative hashish. Police say hashish is stronger than the weed, but smokers say they get the same kind of high from both.

Barbiturates were also not included in the survey.

The survey, prepared by the addiction foundation and released Tuesday, showed out of 1,002 in a questionnaire sampling only 303 — most of them marijuana smokers—said they had ever used drugs.

The survey did not attempt to find out why drugs are used. Its 49 tables simply show the incidence of drug use among students according to sex and age groupings.

Drugs included marijuana, glue, LSD, methedrine, solvents, heroin and tranquilizers.

Russell, who also directed NAF surveys for five other school districts, was at the Tueday press conference at school board headquarters.

He said it would be unwise to label the survey findings "bad" because young people who use the drugs generally see them as good.

Drugs are an aspect of pop culture, he said, and its leaders — Timothy Leary and the Beatles — have sanctioned their use as one way of finding a better way of life.

GUIDE BOARD

Superintendent of schools A. J. Longmore said the survey will guide the board in modifying its drug education program.

E. G. Callbeck, co-ordinator of special education services, noted while Vancouver is considered a drug production and distribution centre, drug use has not proliferated here.

Of the 1,002 students surveyed 22.2 per cent said they have smoked marijuana; 68 students said they have used LSD; 33 students methedrine; 17 students heroin; and 133 glue or solvents.

The figures indicate that while only a handful of students had used addictives such as methedrine (speed) and heroin at the time the survey was made — April 24 and 25 — even fewer said they were still using them.

The same is true for glue; while more than 100 students said they had sniffed glue, only nine said they were still doing so.

Twenty-two per cent said they has used tranquilizers obtained with a prescription, but most of them fell into the once-a-year bracket; 7.7 per cent said they had used non-prescription tranquilizers.

Callbeck attributed the declining use of methedrine, heroin and LSD and the decline in glue-sniffing to the increased amount of information on effects.

Ask The Times

Q. What was the original idea behind lowering a flag to half-mast, and when did the practice start? I have been able to come up with two theories—both highly unlikely. One is that the space between the top of the flag and the top of the pole was left for the pennant of the angel of death. The other is that the space was where a portion of the flag had been torn off to be used as a shroud for the coffin. — A.M.

A. There are several theories, none of which can be fully substantiated. However, one of the most feasible is that the custom began in the early 17th century when the Royal Navy and other forces were engaged in battle on the high seas. When a ship surrendered it lowered its colors to half-mast. Service regulations, which state that the colors shall only be lowered as a signal of respect, courtesy, mourning or disaster appear to support this theory. It would seem a natural sequence that disaster, once meaning a surrender of a ship, would graduate to also signalling the death of a sovereign or leader.

SAANICH MAN KILLED AFTER SHOPPING TRIP

A 76-year-old Saanich man died in hospital Tuesday night three hours after he was hit by a car when he tried to push his bicycle across the Trans-Canada Highway at Wascana.

Police say George Maw, 75 Battleford, was returning home from a shopping trip when the accident occurred about 5 p.m.

The driver of the car, identified by police as John F. Crossley, 61, of 748 Audley, was travelling east on the highway when Maw started across the road.

Police said Maw's purchases were in the carrier on the bicycle. He had been to a store several blocks from home and was on his way back.

Small Painting Fetches $14,600

More than 250 persons watched a small painting of a Cree Indian sell for $14,600 at Lunds Auctioneers on Tuesday.

It was the climax of a 3½-hour sale of paintings which saw 245 works of art fetch a total of $101,000.

The painting which caused the most excitement was by Charles Russell, a 19th century U.S. artist who painted the old west. He was born in 1865 in St. Louis, Mo.

A mounted Indian and a mounted cowboy, also by Russell, sold for $8,700 and $8,500 respectively, while the price paid for an illustrated envelope by the artist was $3,700.

★ ★ ★

Altogether the Russell paintings realized a total of $36,500.

Names of the buyers were not disclosed by auctioneer Wilf Lund but he said all but one were from the United States.

Other paintings which brought high prices were by A. Y. Jackson, J. E. H. MacDonald and Arthur Lismer, members of Canada's Group of Seven.

Sale price of the works ranged from $2,600 to $245.

While the prices paid for these works were much too high for the majority of art lovers, many excellent paintings sold for less than $100.

New Chancellor Known Tonight

The next chancellor of the University of Victoria will be known tonight.

Official deadline for the return of ballots was Tuesday. They were counted today.

Uvic graduates have voted for one of three candidates running for the chancellor's post and nine candidates for six senate seats.

Chancellor candidates are lawyer Lloyd McKenzie, author-judge Roderick Haig-Brown and student Bob Higinbotham.

Results are expected to be announced at tonight's senate meeting.

NEW TUG FOR HARBOR

The newest addition to Island Tug and Barge Ltd.'s fleet arrived this morning.

The 65-foot Port Alfred is two years old and will be used mainly for harbor duties.

Formerly on the east coast, she made her way to Victoria through the Panama Canal.

Arthur Mayse . . .

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS cards have trickled in, and if they represent par for the Yuletide course, I'm halfway convinced we should call the whole thing off. Where the seasonal jollity? Where are the candles, stars, poinsettias and holly?

One of these determinedly untraditional cards is an artist's conception of lower Government Street. It's nicely done, but it is about as Christmasy as the first of July.

★

The colors run strong to brown, grey and washed-out blue; in fact the only bright touch is supplied by a peppering of little red crosses and question-marks. These, according to the reader who sent the card along, indicate where the artist took liberties with his subject matter.

This is the spirit of Christmas? If so, it leaves me cold. I'm for camels, shepherds and carolers.

But at least, it's preferable to the family news roundup, a multigraphed, single-spaced, triple-folded, wife-scrivened exercise in reportage that masquerades as a Christmas greeting.

★

No matter how dear the senders, the mere sight of yet another such breezy mass communication is enough to topple me out of my tree.

On the chance that you haven't yet been subjected to a family news-letter I'll prepare you for the inevitable by manufacturing a sample:

Dear Friends:

Well, here we all are again after another perfectly wonderful year to bring you up to date on our little adventures. So much water has flowed under the bridge, as we say in our family circle, ha-ha, that we hardly know where to begin.

First, you will be delighted to know that Art continues to forge ahead in his chosen profession. (Interpreted, this means that they shifted my desk three feet.) Also, Your Scribe has undertaken a fascinating new linguistic endeavor (which is to say is that Win invested our $20 Expo 70 savings on a beginner's course in Japanese.) We have embarked on a bout of home improvement (finally broke down and treated our TV to a new picture-tube) and have adopted the healthful practice of taking a brisk morning and evening strolll.

In plain English rather than the rarified terms of the family news letter, we walk the dog.

★

So much for the sample, which I trust will explain my phobia against these annual burbles.

Our mailbox lid has just creaked open and clanged shut. Against expectation, I hope the day's take includes just one honest-to-pete card in colors that delight the eye.

With holly on it, or a Christmas tree, or maybe even camels.

WHILE TROLLING FOR spring salmon that wouldn't bite, Anne E. Anderson of 2307 Howard Street amused herself by stringing together limericks against the time when the sponsors of a current Back-East limerick contest draw a bead on Victoria.

★

Mrs. Anderson offers one of her limericks for a try-out:

'When Victoria honors her day
High-rises will shadow the way,
Amid new instant slums
Will sound bagpipes and drums
Where past charms have been blasted away.'

The writer explains that she isn't "agin progress", but is violently opposed to "the gluttonous tearing down of fine old houses and replacing them with match boxes and domino towers."

Up to a point, I agree. I also hope that the towers of vertical housing will be confined to areas that stand to benefit from their presence.

But time brings change, and like it or not, I expect the years ahead will see many more of those fine old places disintegrate in clouds of plaster-dust.

They were built for large families; and increasingly, the small-to-medium family becomes the rule.

The sad fact is that a city must alter to meet the requirements forced upon it by its era. Even Victoria.

★

My own guess is that as our population increases and the demand for building sites grows heavier, we'll be lucky if a mere few of the big old houses survive.

A pity—but that, I think, is the shape of our future.

Alberta Farmers Reject Merger

EDMONTON (CP) — The Farmers' Union of Alberta Tuesday endorsed the principle of a single voice for all Alberta farmers and voted against joining the National Farmers' Union.

Delegates to the FUA's annual convention agreed to amalgamate with the Alberta Federation of Agriculture by a 947-to-173 vote shortly after rejecting a merger with the NFU by a vote of 946 to 206.

Paul Babey, president of the FUA, said he was pleased with the results because he favors a direct-membership organization.

"The FUA has never gone along with the NFU proposals from the very first . . . they (FUA) have always wanted to see an organization in which the co-operatives and the commodity groups be included." The NFU has never agreed to this.

AFA President Nelson Malm said in an interview:

"We are very pleased. In fact we've been working toward this for a number of years so farmers would be able to work under one organization and it seems we will be able to attain this end now."

VIEW DIFFERS

But Roy Atkinson, president of the NFU, had a different view of the rejection of the NFU.

"It hurts the farmers of this nation and that's the important thing to me."

He also said the vote was not a surprise and that "special delegates were brought in on the last day to oppose the vote."

Asked who had brought in the delegates, he said:

"The executive of the FUA. And I don't think they'd deny it."

However, Mr. Babey did deny the accusation, saying, "There was no way the FUA executive could have brought in delegates. They are selected by the locals, the locals support them and send them. . . .

"What really happened was that the people became very conscious of the problems and that the future of the FUA and the farm organizations was at stake."

SEVEN PROVINCES JOIN

Farmers in Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia are members of NFU.

Alberta, with about 30,000 members in the FUA, and Quebec have not joined while Newfoundland does not have a farm association. The Quebec agricultural organization, L'Union Catholique de Cultivateurs, has more than 50,000 members.

Mr. Babey stated his position in his opening address Monday:

"I cannot in good conscience support the idea of a national farm organization completely separated from other farm organizations.

"We must also realize that dissolving the FUA in favor of a national direct-membership organization could give rise to the establishment of a new organization to fill the gap at the provincial level. The division of farmers at the grass roots level is growing in other provinces—it must be avoided here."

Fountain To Remain In Dark

Centennial Fountain will remain in the dark until at least January.

Faced with a $12,650 repair bill to fix fountain lights the Victoria parks committee Tuesday decided to toss the final decision into the lap of the incoming council.

The lights went out last winter after one of the conduits carrying power cables sprang a leak and posed a threat to the fountain pool.

Subsequent studies came up with a price of $20,000 to do a first-calss job with complete safety features built in.

That was too rich for the city's blood and design changes were requested to trim the budget back to $12,650.

City manager Dennis Young said the city had $10,000 on hand for the repair job. But treasurer James Bramley came up with a corrected amount of only $4,200 in the fountain fund.

That was when the committee decided to let the new city council find the extra $8,400—or leave the lights out.

Motion Tabled

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council Tuesday tabled for one week a motion by Mayor Tom Campbell that the city impose a three per cent tax on hotel rooms. A similar motion was turned down by council two years ago.

MEETINGS CALENDAR

Student Failure Charges Refuted

Claims that high school dormitory students at Ganges posed disciplinary problems and had a poor record were hotly denied Tuesday by school district chairman George Heineky and James Campbell, B.C. School Trustees' president.

The allegations aere made Monday by Tom Davidson, who defeated Campbell in the Saturna Island school trustee election Saturday.

He said the dormitory problem was the reason for Campbell's defeat.

Campbell asserted that the academic record in the Gulf Islands school was outstanding.

He added that in 1967, 27 students had graduated, 15 in the academic field. Ten went on to post-secondary institutions, mostly universities. Last year there were 29 graduates, 15 in the academic field. Eight went on to post-secondary institutions.

The current year, Campbell said, had seen 21 graduating, 14 in the academic field. Of these, 13 were attending post-secondary institutions.

Three in the latter group were former dormitory students.

"I think that is pretty good. So it is very disturbing to read that a poor academic record has something to do with it."

Questioned about discipline, Campbell said that five students had been dismissed for disciplinary reasons over a period of three years. Some of these, he added, had been readmitted.

Expressing dismay at Davidson's statements, Campbell said some parents had taken their children away for other reasons "but we have no evidence of what those reasons are."

Davidson claimed that that he had not "been able to pry any information out of the system yet" about children who were taken away by parents.

Discussing his election defeat, Campbell said, "I have to accept the responsibility for not correcting the misconception which obviously exists about the school system. I did not realize it was so far from the truth."

Reduction Of Militia Coming Soon

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's reserve armed forces will be slashed by between 8,225 and 9,400 men in the next few months, it was reliably reported Tuesday.

The reduction could reduce reserves strength to as low as 17,200 men compared with the present 26,600. The new figure might be as high as 18,375.

The difference represents the spread between a 35-and a 40-per-cent cut in the militia, which the reports say will bear almost the entire brunt of the military manpower squeeze.

EXACT SIZE

The exact size of the cuts in percentage terms has not been worked out yet. However, the new force plan is being rapidly whipped into shape and Defence Minister Leo Cadieux is expected to announce it in the Commons next week.

Cadieux said several months ago that the reserves would be reduced, in line with the government's over-all force-cutting program.

The strength of the regular forces is to be chopped by 16,000 men in the next two years or so, to a level of about 82,000.

THREE YEARS

Under the government's austerity program, the defence department has been ordered to live within its present $1,800,000,000 budget for an additional three years.

The militia at present represents more than 88 per cent of the total reserve establishment, with 23,500 men. The naval reserves have a strength of about 2,300 and the air reserve 800.

The intention to reduce the militia by a reported 35 to 40 per cent represents a victory of sorts for the Conference of Defence Associations, a national organization representing 15 individual corps and reserve associations.

The conference has been pressing the defence department to keep the cuts as small as possible while maintaining the position that neither the regular-force cuts nor the reserve cuts are justified.

A few months ago, Lt.-Gen. Michael Dare, vice-chief of defence staff, was quoted as saying he could "live with" a reduction of 50 per cent in the militia.

Since then the conference has held a series of meetings with Cadieux in an effort to stave off any reduction of this scale.

The latest meeting took place Monday. Afterward, Brig-Gen. William Howard of Calgary, conference chairman, said in a statement he felt that the conference's representations would have resulted from the initial force than that which would "result in a stronger reserve proposed changes."

Funeral Set For Retired Railroader

Victoria-born Ernest Harold Davy spent most of his life riding in the cab of an Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway locomotive.

He died Sunday, and funeral services will be held Thursday in Hayward's Funeral Chapel, 734 Broughton, at 1:30 p.m.

Davy started working for the E and N as a wiper in 1909 and became fireman in 1910. In 1914 he moved over to the right-hand side of the cab as engineer and served on all the company's freight and passenger runs.

When he retired in August, 1959, he was engineer of the Dayliner. He was a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the Canadian Pacific Pensioners.

He is survived by his wife Dora and step-daughter Mrs. Clara Hill, both of 2568 Margate.

Funeral services, with Rev. Dr. H. W. Kerley officiating, will be followed by cremation.

NO-FAULT COVERAGE

Car Insurance Hiked $22

Flat-Rate Basis Across Province

By BRUCE YEMEN

B.C. drivers are being told to expect a car insurance rate increase of $22 next year as a result of the compulsory liability coverage brought in by the provincial government.

That increase will be separate from any other rate jumps brought on by rising costs across the country. A rise of six per cent was predicted last week by Toronto insurance officials.

The cost of the compulsory B.C. insurance is being assessed on a flat-rate basis across the province.

An advertising campaign to acquaint insurance agents and members of the public with the impact of the new scheme is expected to begin shortly.

• • •

Radio commercials placed on behalf of the Insurance Bureau of Canada have set the increased costs at six cents a day or $21.90 a year.

This will cover inclusion of $50,000 in third-party liability insurance for injury or death and damage to property.

Failure to carry such insurance after Jan. 1 will cost drivers a fine of not less than $250.

A local insurance agent said today that no information about details of the new scheme has been provided yet.

The new system is based on the no-fault principle and provides compensation for injuries or death and property damage up to the $50,000 limit.

Larger coverage can be purchased at a cost which has not yet been disclosed.

Drivers with policies in force will be automatically covered under the new system until they renew their coverage in 1970.

• • •

The new scheme was introduced at the last session of the legislature with Attorney-General Leslie Peterson suggesting premium reductions of up to 25 per cent could result for some drivers.

Opposition critics at the time expressed doubt about that possibility and charged Peterson with deliberately neglecting to figure in the cost of collision coverage.

Collision coverage can still be purchased as before over and above the basic coverage.

Peterson hailed the no-fault coverage as giving the widest, most generous protection to accident victims that is available anywhere in Canada.

THATCHER ON TALKS:

'An Exercise In Futility'

OTTAWA (CP)—Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan described the federal-provincial constitutional conference today as "an exercise in futility" he can well do without. "I don't want to come to another of these for a long, long time," he said.

"What are we all doing discussing the constitution? That's not the issue. Economic problems are the issue."

Other westerners at the conference said they agreed there had been little or no progress on constitutional matters. They too felt, in Mr. Thatcher's words, that: "We should get down to bread-and-butter matters."

Prime Minister Trudeau announced the heads of government will meet Feb. 16 to discuss non-constitutional matters, including inflation and pollution.

"Fine," said Mr. Thatcher.

However, he said, Western legislatures will all be sitting at that time and this could cause problems. In addition, the scheduled meeting is only for one day.

CONSIDERED SERIOUS

Mr. Thatcher said he wanted Mr. Trudeau "to wait until April, after the sessions are over, but he feels these things are so serious we should get together."

By that time John Young, head of the federal prices and incomes commission, "will have made his report and we may find that the methods we are using to fight inflation are not enough."

"If they are not working we will have to find new weapons and provincial consent may be needed. . . . I think that's why the meeting has been called so early."

Premier Harry Strom of Alberta said of the conference:

"This was the least progress of all the conferences I've been to and I've been to three. . . . It was just a rehash of positions."

Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba spoke more conservatively than his Western colleagues. Still, he said the conference was little more than a "teach-in."

SHOULD BE CLOSED

If progress is to be made, he said, the conferences should be closed to press, radio and television. In addition, meetings should be held every six months or so.

Mr. Thatcher agreed that conferences should be closed, partly to eliminate speeches directed at TV audiences and partly to give premiers room to manoeuvre.

How can Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand of Quebec "or anybody else who faces an election be really frank with the others in front of those cameras?"

Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia disagreed. The conferences should remain open "so that Canadians know what their governments are talking about."

Mr. Bennett also said there hadn't been much progress. But he noted constitutional change is bound to be a slow business; how slow he would not estimate.

Motorcycle Gang Members Get Paddle, Prison Terms

CAMPBELL RIVER — Two members of a motorcycle gang Tuesday were sentenced to three strokes each of the paddle, a rarely-used punishment.

Alfred Ronald (Bubsie) Worthington, 20, was sentenced to 2½ years in the penitentiary and Terry Vernon Scott, 25, was given a three-year term in addition to the paddling after they were found guilty of robbery with violence.

★ ★ ★

Francis Vivian (Frank) Shaw, 19, was given an 18-month definite and two-year indeterminate sentence at Oakalla prison after being convicted of theft related to the same incident.

"Oh no," sobbed Mrs. Matt Worthington, her head falling forward on her knees, as the judge sentenced her son. Girls in the courtroom sobbed and a defence attorney hurried from the room as judgment was passed.

Worthington's lawyer, Victor Stephen of Courtenay, knocked over papers and furniture in his rush from the court. He told a reporter later he was so furious at the severity of the sentences he fled the room to avoid losing his temper.

★ ★ ★

Scott and Shaw are from Ontario and Worthington lives in Campbell River.

Michael Bailey, 18, of West Vancouver, who is employed as a cook in Gold River, laid the charges after being beaten and robbed of $124 in his Campbell River hotel room Oct. 9.

Bailey, chief witness during the two-day trial, said the cyclists had entered his hotel room in the

Paddle Preferable To Lash

The paddle as punishment for crime is rarely used but, for the liberals who shudder, the Criminal Code actually specifies whipping with the cat-o' nine tails.

Whipping could be part of a court sentence after conviction for a variety of offences, including rape, armed burglary, choking, drugging, robbery and indecent assault, city prosecutor Cory Stolte said today.

The Code says a court may sentence a convicted person to be whipped up to three times. Females are exempted.

In practice the lash has been retired for some time and the paddle substituted, a veteran police officer explained.

WITH HOLES

The paddle is made of leather with holes drilled in it.

The paddle is administered in a prison and in the presence of a doctor.

The officer described the procedure this way:

The offender is brought blindfolded into a special room where his trousers are lowered and he is strapped to a table.

FIRST STROKE

A guard delivers the specified number of strokes. The holes in the leather have the effect of producing "tremendous welts," with the first stroke. These welts burst and bleed with subsequent strokes.

"I've seen real hard-case criminals who say it's nothing but they don't sit down for a week.

"And I've seen where 10 strokes have been ordered but only five given and the other five held in abeyance, to be cancelled for good behavior. The man always turns immediately into a model prisoner."

He said he believes the paddle has not been ordered in a B.C. court for the past seven or eight years.

B.C. Joins Others In Condemning Talks

By JOHN MIKA

A British Columbia delegate today fully agreed with Saskatchewan Premier Thatcher's stand that talking about constitutional matters is an unnecessary waste of time.

"That's exactly my feelings," said Industrial Development, Trade and Commerce Minister Waldo Skillings in a telephone interview.

"As far as I'm concerned the whole trouble with the federal government delegation is that they're lawyers.

"We'd get more done with more businessmen at these talks—like Premier Bennett and Premier Thatcher who get right down to the nitty-gritty, the real problems."

"We've had a constitution for the last 100 or 102 years and it's worked damn well."

TOO BRITISH

"The whole trouble is that I think the French people don't like BNA because it stands for British North America and I think personally they want a new constitution and new name for it to eliminate British connections."

Skillings said problems such as freight rates and overseas market difficulties should be discussed instead at major meetings of the federal and provincial governments.

He said the conference just ended accomplished little because it was open and tempted some of the participants to pump parochial politics.

"Personally I think it's a great mistake to have public issues of such tremendous importance discussed in the open with television cameras and reporters present for the simple reason too many make political speeches.

"For example, take Ross Thatcher, I though he made some of the finest statements at the conference but they're talking about the next election to their people, on the television and other sessions.

"It was the same way with Premier Bertrand (of Quebec) and the new prime minister of Manitoba, all he was doing was trying to make an impact back on the prairies.

"The idea of these conferences should be to get together and solve problems but they become part of the problem as soon as they get here."

$5 Million Freighter Abandoned on Rocks

Salvage officials abandoned any hope of saving the 628-foot Greek freighter Treis Ierarchai at 10 a.m. today, adding her to the roll of ships claimed by the "graveyard of the Pacific."

The 16,000-ton, $5 million bulk carrier remained precariously lodged on jagged rocks at Ferrer Point, 70 miles north of Tofino.

Bruce McKay, dispatcher for Vancouver Tug and Barge Co. Ltd., who have had two tugs standing by, said:

"The situation is hopeless. It looks as if her back is broken. She's settled by the stern, her afterdecks are awash and the ship is split open at No. 3 hold from deck to bottom. All seven holds are flooded, as well as the engine room."

He added that rising southeasterly winds were expected to reach gale strength.

The captain and 28-man crew will be taken by special bus from Gold River to Vancouver Thursday morning.

Treis Ierarchai, owned by Diamond Freighters Corporation of Greece was bound from Japan to Crofton to load lumber when it ran aground Sunday.

Phase Two of Hillside Shopping Centre Races to Completion

Construction crews are busy building the walls for Hillside Shopping Centre's Phase Two expansion, scheduled to open in Spring.

"Phase Two will be larger than originally planned, due to the tremendous response of Victoria shoppers to the Hillside Centre and the enclosed mall. We have purchased additional property on Edgeware, obtained the necessary re-zoning, and construction is now under way," announced R. G Bentall, Executive Vice - President of Dominion Construction, developers and owners of the Hillside Shopping Centre.

Revised plans for Phase Two will provide a health spa, 26 additional specialty stores, a second department store and parking for a total of 2,000 cars. The health spa will be completed by December, 1969, the specialty stores are scheduled to open in March, and the department store in late summer, 1970.

Hillside, Vancouver Island's largest regional shopping centre, opened Phase One in February 1969, with Simpsons-Sears and 33 specialty shops. Simpsons - Sears own their department store premises.

Upon completion of Phase Two, Hillside will comprise 400,000 square feet of retail space. The design will retain the modern architectural style of Phase One with additional landscaping on perimeters.

A twin-theatre and professional office building complex will be added later, during Phase Three.

Leasing Agents for the huge complex are B & W Management Company of Vancouver, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Dominion Construction.
